DEDICATION

This work is dedicated:

To my own precious "kinder": Dorothy Gwendolyn Park; Charles Lieben Park; Stephen Francois Park; Genevieve Eloise Park; each one, for whom I am thankful. May they ever be blessed, and be a blessing to the world.

To the memory of my greatly honored Christian father, Jacob Daniel Liebendorfer. He was a son of Johann Jacob Liebendorfer, III and Christiana Brennaman; and a grandson of Johann Jakob Liebendorfer, Jr. and Anna Christina Weingartner, who were emigrants from Germany to America, in 1817. Both Johann Jacob Liebendorfer, III, (my grandfather) and Johann Jakob Liebendorfer, Jr., (my great grandfather) were born in Grossglattbach, Württemberg, Germany, on the dates, October 17, 1797 and April 19, 1766, respectively.

To my sturdy German ancestors, who have always been an inspiration to me, through the history of their piety, endurance, thrift, constructiveness, honesty, patriotism, and loyalty to God.

TO THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO

Dear Sir:

I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 14th inst. and in reply to inform you that the same has been forwarded to the proper authorities for their consideration.

I am, Sir, very respectfully,
Yours truly,

ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

"There are no bounds, which we know, for time or eternity; all seems to be center; there are no bars for the gates of space--they are ajar. Even time does not pass, for time always was, and always will be! We pass the time, and the spark we call life, is but a part of eternity."

This genealogy and history has been prepared from the most authentic information obtainable, at this late date, 1937. We are deeply indebted to the many "cousins" in America and abroad, who have so kindly sent us their best available information concerning their own families; we are especially grateful to the following named relatives and friends in Switzerland, Germany, and America, for their worthy contributions, and delightful co-operation in this pleasant and patient provoking work:

Sometimes, it has been quite a task to translate correctly the many letters which we have received from Switzerland and Germany. The foreign style of writing differs greatly from ours, and they, just as we in America, have words which are very meaningful, but do not carry the same shade of meaning when they are changed into another language.

It is much more difficult to read genealogical and historical information in German, than to read ordinary letters. This is largely because genealogy is always difficult reading, and Germany differs very much from America in her customs, special days, and traditions. The system of records kept by the Evangelical Ministers in Germany, is excellent.

My good husband purchased for me a new Classic German Dictionary. This, with my recollection of German in high school and college, became my equipment for the work of translation. My faithful daughter, Dorothy, has been of the greatest help to me in the necessary translation of the information from Germany. Others of my friends, and Faculty members of the German Department in the University of Nebraska, have all given valuable assistance. Then, I have had another helper--a real pal--and that is my daughter, Genevieve. She has assisted in the translations, but her outstanding work has been as my secretary and stenographer. Her loyal support in all of my efforts to obtain information, has been a great blessing to me. My sons, Lieben and Pictures of the past!

Real, as though painted yesterday;
Memory holds them fast,
Then, looses them in play.
Perchance, a home of childhood
Comes before our eyes;
A tree, where the old mill stood,
Is viewed with glad surprise.
The Church is on the hill;
There, loved ones knelt in prayer,
And the silent city, so near, and still,
Brought rest, and banished care.
The school, where laughter rang,
And lessons were learned by rule,
Stands where wild flowers sprang,
While the creek runs clear and cool.

These pictures, and more,
Come back in quiet thought,
As we hear the old folk-lore
And visions, with patience fraught.
Strong hearts it takes,
To idealize what's real;
Stronger hearts it makes,
To realize an ideal.
Though the future is veiled before us,
As life's upward pathway we climb,
Fear not! A guiding light is o'er us,
And reveals only one step at a time.

INTRODUCTION

"Not to know what happened before we were born, is to remain always a child."

--Cicero

The name, "Liebendorfer", means "Lover of a Village". In Germany, it is spelled "Liebendorfer" or "Liebenderfer", and, sometimes, "Liebendoerfer". This was our name after 1682; before that date, it is recorded as "Dübendorfer". "Düben" means "yonder"; "Lieben" means "love"; "dorf" means "village".

Since my very earliest childhood knowledge of a German ancestry, it has ever held a fascination for me. I have always had a sincere longing to visit Germany, and I believe that some day I shall be given that privilege.

This genealogy and history of the Liebendorfer family, although necessarily incomplete, has to do with information gathered from records in Switzerland, Germany, and America. Do I hear you ask, how did it all happen? How did you know where to inquire for information? I did not know. In fact, I had asked many questions of my closest relatives in America, concerning Germany, but no one seemed to know anything more definite than the fact that Grandfather Liebendorfer came from Germany, and lived in Pennsylvania; also, that my father was born in Pennsylvania, somewhere along the banks of Slippery Rock Creek, not far from New Castle or Pittsburgh.

For a long time, I had no further information. No one seemed interested in helping me to investigate the family tree. I am sure they were not afraid of what might be found on its branches, but rather, they did not know how to begin the quest, and neither did I. Although I knew it was a long task for some one, I thought it should be done. In the words of Rudyard Kipling, "Any one might have done it, but His whisper came to me".

In the month of March, 1928, my husband and I made a trip, from our home in Lincoln, Nebraska, to Baltimore, Maryland, to visit his mother, also his sister and family. At my suggestion, we returned home by way of New Castle, Pennsylvania, so we might make some inquiry about the family of Liebendorfer. How should we go about it? Well, to consult a city directory or a telephone book, would not be a bad idea, so that is what we did. To my great joy and surprise, there was the name of Mrs. David Liebendorfer,--could it possibly be the widow of my father's brother, David? At least, I intended to find out, so I felt that I must locate her, and talk with her, first of all.

After making a copy of the street address, and getting the location of the home, it was not long until our car was driving into her yard, and a few moments later, I was standing at the outside door, knocking. Imagine my anticipation! Presently, a small, sweet faced, neatly dressed, German lady, of mature years, opened the door. I inquired if she were "Mrs. Liebendorfer". When she replied, affirmatively, I said, "My name is Liebendorfer, too!" A wonderful smile came over her face, and she said, "Welcome! If your name is Liebendorfer, come right in".

What a wonderful welcome it was! Soon, we felt very much acquainted, especially after I had fully identified myself. Together, we looked at the family album, and I quickly recognized, even through the tears that filled my eyes, the faces of my father, mother, two brothers, and a sister. My picture was not there, for I was much younger than the other children, but Aunt Thusen Elda accepted of me, then and there, just the same. It seemed almost like a dream, but it was not; instead, it was the delightful reality of having a part of my dreams come true. A phone call, very soon brought Aunt Thusen Elda's brother, Mr. Swineford, to meet us, and it was not long until my husband and I had consented to stay over a day, and get acquainted with some of the other relatives, in and near New Castle.

It might be of interest to record here, that Aunt Thusen Elda (Swineford) Liebendorfer, came into the family, in 1860, by her marriage to my uncle David Martin Luther Liebendorfer. This, I believe, was not long after my grandfather, Johann Jacob Liebendorfer, III, had married Mrs. Maria Swineford (the mother of Thusen Elda), as his third wife.

The next day, March 14, 1928, the four of us took a trip, and visited the town of Wurttemberg, Pennsylvania, which is located on Slippery Rock Creek, about 15 miles southeast of New Castle, and about 40 miles northwest of Pittsburgh.

It was in the year 1817, according to information which we have since received from church records at Grossglattbach, Germany, when the family of Liebendörfer came from the province of Württemberg, Germany, to America. The long trip on the water, with a family of eleven children, was no small venture, and sad indeed were their hearts, when one child sickened and died, the body being placed in the great briny deep. After a three months' voyage on the Atlantic Ocean, they may have landed at New York City. Then, for a brief period, they settled in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. From there, the family moved to Greensburg, Westmoreland County, and later went on into Butler County. In 1829, they found a desirable site in Lawrence County, along the shores of Slippery Rock Creek, near New Castle, Pennsylvania. Here, they bought a large tract of land, and set themselves to the task of building a town, community, and self-supported industries of their own.

The leaders of this community were: Johann Jakob Liebendörfer, Jr. (born, 1766), with his wife, Anna Christina Weingartner (born, 1773), and their son-in-law, George Frederick Rapp (born, 1789), who had married their second daughter, Anna Maria Liebendörfer, (born, 1796). George Frederick Rapp was one of Napoleon's distinguished soldiers, having been decorated with at least four medals, for his valor. It is likely that he fought in the Battle of Waterloo, Sunday, June 18, 1815.

This pioneer life in a foreign country, was very different from their previous experiences in the Fatherland. Indians and wild animals were no small part of the dangers to be met here in America, but these sturdy Germans were not to be easily defeated, so they toiled on faithfully, from day to day. They christened their new American home, "Württemberg", after their native province of "Württemberg", Germany, and by this name it is known today.

Here, they built a flour mill and a saw mill. Later, the two men and their helpers, built an oil mill, where they manufactured flax-seed oil. Before they were able to have a river canal in operation, they had to haul the oil by wagon to Pittsburgh. A woolen mill was placed in the second story of the oil mill. Here, they carded the wool. After the carding process, it was left in rolls about one-half inch thick by eighteen inches long. The farmers round about would bring wool to the mill, have it carded, then take it home again, where the rolls were spun into yarn. So clever and neat were they in uniting roll to roll, as they spun it, that a novice could not detect where it was united. Often, the mill wheels were kept going continuously, from very early morning until night. The woolen yarn was used for knitting stockings, mittens, and gloves. Much of it was woven into flannel for shirts, dresses, and other clothing. This weaving was done on hand looms.

Large quantities of flax and cane were raised. The flax-seed was ground into meal, and linseed oil, by pressure between large stone mill wheels. The mill stones were about one foot in thickness, and five feet in diameter. From the fibre, the women of the household, prepared and spun the linen thread, on the family spinning wheel. This thread was then woven into linen cloth on a hand loom. One family would buy a hand loom, and do the weaving for the entire neighborhood, weaving carpet, flannel, linen, and linsey, which was made by weaving a woolen woof into a linen warp. A very nominal sum, per yard, was charged for this work. These industrious German pioneers opened stores, as well as mills and factories, for the community. They also built churches and a school house. Grandfather Johann Jacob Liebendörfer, III, donated the ground on which the Centennial Methodist Episcopal Church was erected, and still stands. I attended services there, Sunday, June 23, 1936. Others of the Liebendörfers donated ground on which churches were built. These churches are in good repair, and have regular and well attended services. I do not know about the land for the school house.

As we walked about in this wonderful old historic town, in 1928, we saw on the shore of Slippery Rock Creek, the remains of an old log cabin, which had been built by French soldiers, about 1756. Some 61 years later, Grandfather Liebendörfer and his family, had lived in that log cabin, and there, my father, Jacob Daniel Liebendörfer, was born, January 24, 1826. The logs of the cabin showed the effects of having been badly battered by attacks from the Indians. The factories are now gone, but one of the old stone mill wheels is still observable in the water, although largely covered with debris. Wurttemberg, Pennsylvania, is today a quiet little town of about 500 inhabitants. It is situated as to rivers, hills, and trees, very much like Grossglattbach, Germany, where my Grandfather Liebendörfer, was born, October 17, 1797.

Since that first visit with Aunt Thusen Elda, I have been privileged to be in her home several times. She has been untiring in her efforts to help me learn more about my people. Although, now in her 98th year, she is still spared to us, and is a blessing to many. Bless her dear kind heart! May she become a centenarian!

About a year ago, I was greatly encouraged and helped in the genealogy, by a copy of some work which had been prepared by Mr. Robert Reed Liebendorfer, a son of great Uncle Michael Liebendörfer. It was sent to me by his gracious niece, Miss Mary G. Riffer, of whom Aunt Thusen Elda had told me. Still, I could find no one who knew anything about our family in Germany. I was determined to find out. But how? Again, the staring question! I have a rather homely philosophy of my own, which goes something like this: "What should be done, can be done". I was certain that information should, and could be obtained, even at so late a date as this. It looked as though it was my job, so I set myself to the task.

One day, I asked my daughter, Genevieve, to bring to me our best maps of Germany. Together, we held a geographic conference. The only clue I could think of, was "Württemberg". But what good would that do? We located the province or republic of Württemberg. Then, what next? A bright idea! Certainly, the provinces of Germany must be very much the same as our states in America--each with its own capital. Why not write to some official in Stuttgart, the capital of Württemberg? This I did. It was just a simple letter of inquiry, to learn what information they might have about the family of Liebendörfer. I stated that I was the daughter of Jacob Daniel Liebendörfer, and that my grandfather, Johann Jacob Liebendörfer, III, had come from Württemberg, Germany, to America, about 1814, I thought. You see, I did not have the date quite correct. It was 1817, instead, as I later learned from German records. Then, I addressed the letter "To the Mayor" or "Some other High Official", Stuttgart, Germany, and with a prayer for its safety and the success of its mission, I launched my first letter to Deutschland. That was February 5, 1936.

Imagine my delight, when one morning the mail brought an answer! It was from "Der Oberbürgermeister der Stadt Stuttgart, Deutschland", meaning the mayor of Stuttgart, Dr. Waidelich. On February 27, 1936, Dr. Waidelich had written to Rev. Märkt, the "Evangelical Pfarramt, Grossglattbach, über Vaihingen, on the river Enz", for information which might be available from old Church records in Grossglattbach. Rev. Märkt was very cordial and helpful in his reply of March 5, to Dr. Waidelich. Both gentlemen expressed their joy to learn something of the American line of the "emigrant", as they classify great grandfather, Johann Jakob Liebendörfer, Jr., whom the Church Register in Grossglattbach, Germany, states, "Ist in Jahr 1817 mit seiner ganzen Familie nach Amerika gezogen", meaning, "Moved to America, in 1817, with his entire family". On March 14, Dr. Waidelich mailed to me the results of his investigation, suggesting that I get in touch with the minister in Grossglattbach, for further information.

It is now almost two years, since I received that first letter from Germany. Since then, I have had many letters from "Der Vaterland", and every one is written in German. It seems that the family of Liebendörfer, or Dübendörfer, as it was earlier known, came from near Zürich, Switzerland into Württemberg, Germany; some of the family line may also be traced into Saxony and Swabia, I am told. Time will bring more information to me, and I trust that my anticipated trip to Europe will unfold much valuable history of the family.

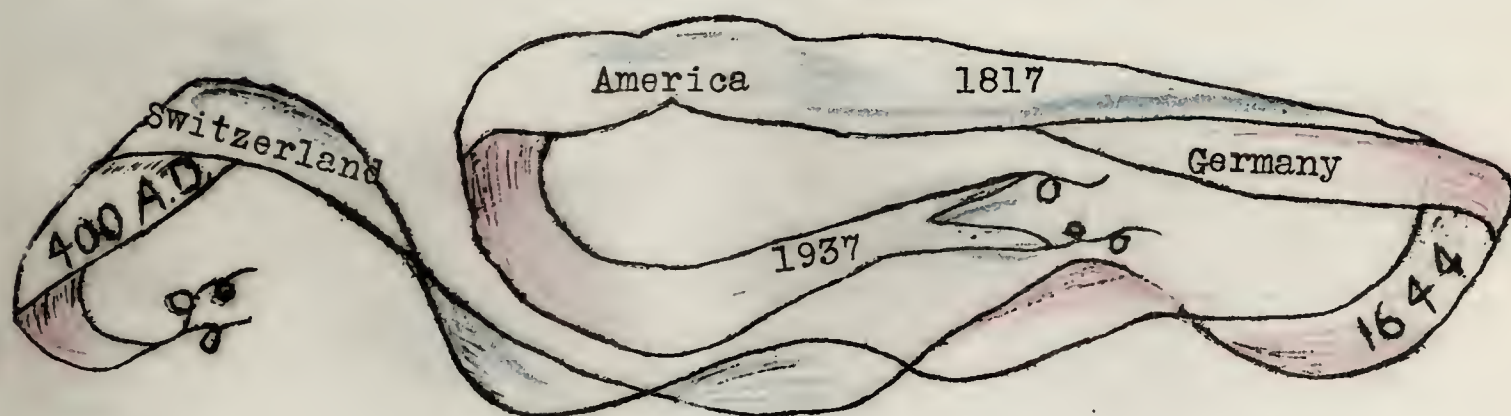

To attempt such a project as a genealogical survey, is a tremendous job, you will agree. We ask your forbearance and charitable for-givenness, where it has not been done completely or perfectly; we have used the information which you have given us. We leave some pages, blank, where you may write your own "errata" and "addenda". This will also give you space for any data, or history of your own family, as the future brings it to you. The "Table of Contents", at the first of this book, will help you to find specific things which interest you, and the "Summary", on page 106, will answer many questions which may come to your mind, as you read the "Romance From the Old Family Tree".

FAMILY NAMES CONNECTED WITH LIEBENDÖRFER, BY MARRIAGE

"A good name is rather to be chosen than great riches."
-- Holy Bible

What is in a name? A great deal, I say. If your name is not what it should be, from the viewpoint of honor, make it what it ought to be. What is the privilege and duty of every man and woman.
-- L. M. L. P.

"He lives, who dies to win a lasting name."
-- Drummond

We have a group of 219 families which have been identified with the Liebendörfer family by marriage. If we had the many fascinating stories of friendships which led to admiration; admirations which developed into love; love of stalwart young men and beautiful young women, which matured into courtship; courtships which were bound forever by marriage, "until death shall you part", then, we would have the true "Romance From the Old Family Tree", but those stories belong to the sacred shrine, called "Home".

GENEALOGICAL RECORDS FROM SWITZERLAND AND GERMANY

"Biography is the only true history"--Carlyle

In those far away countries of Switzerland and Germany, official records are kept concerning every one of their citizens.

The name of Dübendorfer became Liebendörfer, after 1682.

"DÜBENDORFER" Forerunner of Liebendörfer

Named after the village of Dübendorf, of the community of Bassersdorf and Nürensdorf, and first mentioned in the Historical Biographical Lexicon of Switzerland, in 1463, at Baltenswil. There is a space of 87 years between 1463 and the probable birth date for Felix Dübendorfer, of 1550, with which this record begins. That is ample time for three intervening generations, under the approximate dates of 1463, 1492, and 1521, which allows for the usual average length of time between generations.

Following, the next earliest record is taken, respectively, from the Household Register of Kloten, Switzerland; the Register of 1644, of Opfikon, Switzerland; the Register of 1654, of Gerlisberg, Switzerland; the Evangelical Church Family Register, from 1644-1817, of Grossglattbach, Germany; the Evangelical Church Family Register, of Stuttgart, Germany; records from the 1937 History of the Hummel family, from Frankfurt am Main, Germany; and also the American records.

This record traces the genealogy to Professor Karl Otto Hummel, Frankfurt am Main, Germany; and to Herr Waldemar Kramer, Printer, Frankfurt am Main, Germany.

A* 1 Felix Dübendorfer, b. about 1550, (Baltenswil, Switzerland), m.
2/16/1584 Catharina Benz

2 Hans Dübendorfer, b. 12/25/1584, d. 9/17/1636, m. Maria Maag

* The letters, A, B, C, indicate 3 distinct family lines which are traced. The numerals, 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, etc., indicate succeeding generations. There are other Liebendörfer family lines, of which we have but little record.

I have information, that in Kleinglattbach, Württemberg, Germany, there lives today, (1937), the family of Gottlob Ernst Liebendorfer. He was born in Grossglattbach, Württemberg, Germany, August 8, 1882, and we believe this family to be directly related to the "emigrant", Johann Jakob Liebendorfer, Jr..

My great grandfather, Johann Jakob Liebendörfer, Jr., the "emigrant", born April 19, 1766, had three brothers and two sisters, who remained in Germany. They were Friedrich, 1758-1843; Sophie Catharina, 1760; Johannes, 1768-1834, m., 1794 Margarethe Mörganthaler; Johann Wredel, 1770; and Anna Maria, 1773-1846. At present, (1937), I do not have their individual family lines.

GENEALOGICAL RECORDS FROM AMERICA

"Those who do not look upon themselves as a link connecting the past with the future, do not perform their duty to the world."

--Daniel Webster

In America, it is difficult to obtain genealogical records which date back 35 to 50 years, and longer. Some churches keep records over a long period of time. Most towns and cities are not particular about this. Records must then be gotten mainly from the memory of elderly relatives, family Bibles (unfortunately, there are too few of them, now days), and tomb stones. Sometimes they may be found in the annals of the court house, church, or physician's records.

This genealogy covers the American family of Liebendörfer, which is a group of about 700 descendants from the "emigrant", Johann Jakob Liebendörfer, Jr.. You will find it is chronologically arranged, from 1817 to 1937, covering more than one and one-quarter centuries. We first give a copy of the Evangelical Church Record at Grossglattbach, Germany, concerning Johann Jakob Liebendörfer, Jr., the "emigrant", and his family.

THE UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO
DIVISION OF THE PHYSICAL SCIENCES
DEPARTMENT OF CHEMISTRY

1. The first part of the experiment was devoted to the study of the effect of temperature on the rate of reaction between hydrogen peroxide and potassium iodide. The reaction was carried out in a series of test-tubes, the temperature of which was varied from 10°C to 30°C. The rate of reaction was measured by the volume of iodine liberated, which was determined by titration with sodium thiosulfate.

2. The second part of the experiment was devoted to the study of the effect of the concentration of the reactants on the rate of reaction. The reaction was carried out in a series of test-tubes, the concentration of which was varied. The rate of reaction was measured by the volume of iodine liberated, which was determined by titration with sodium thiosulfate.

3. The third part of the experiment was devoted to the study of the effect of a catalyst on the rate of reaction. The reaction was carried out in a series of test-tubes, the concentration of which was varied. The rate of reaction was measured by the volume of iodine liberated, which was determined by titration with sodium thiosulfate.

4. The fourth part of the experiment was devoted to the study of the effect of the surface area of the reactants on the rate of reaction. The reaction was carried out in a series of test-tubes, the surface area of which was varied. The rate of reaction was measured by the volume of iodine liberated, which was determined by titration with sodium thiosulfate.

5. The fifth part of the experiment was devoted to the study of the effect of the nature of the solvent on the rate of reaction. The reaction was carried out in a series of test-tubes, the nature of the solvent of which was varied. The rate of reaction was measured by the volume of iodine liberated, which was determined by titration with sodium thiosulfate.

6. The sixth part of the experiment was devoted to the study of the effect of the nature of the catalyst on the rate of reaction. The reaction was carried out in a series of test-tubes, the nature of the catalyst of which was varied. The rate of reaction was measured by the volume of iodine liberated, which was determined by titration with sodium thiosulfate.

7. The seventh part of the experiment was devoted to the study of the effect of the nature of the reactants on the rate of reaction. The reaction was carried out in a series of test-tubes, the nature of the reactants of which was varied. The rate of reaction was measured by the volume of iodine liberated, which was determined by titration with sodium thiosulfate.

8. The eighth part of the experiment was devoted to the study of the effect of the nature of the solvent on the rate of reaction. The reaction was carried out in a series of test-tubes, the nature of the solvent of which was varied. The rate of reaction was measured by the volume of iodine liberated, which was determined by titration with sodium thiosulfate.

9. The ninth part of the experiment was devoted to the study of the effect of the nature of the catalyst on the rate of reaction. The reaction was carried out in a series of test-tubes, the nature of the catalyst of which was varied. The rate of reaction was measured by the volume of iodine liberated, which was determined by titration with sodium thiosulfate.

10. The tenth part of the experiment was devoted to the study of the effect of the nature of the reactants on the rate of reaction. The reaction was carried out in a series of test-tubes, the nature of the reactants of which was varied. The rate of reaction was measured by the volume of iodine liberated, which was determined by titration with sodium thiosulfate.

11. The eleventh part of the experiment was devoted to the study of the effect of the nature of the solvent on the rate of reaction. The reaction was carried out in a series of test-tubes, the nature of the solvent of which was varied. The rate of reaction was measured by the volume of iodine liberated, which was determined by titration with sodium thiosulfate.

12. The twelfth part of the experiment was devoted to the study of the effect of the nature of the catalyst on the rate of reaction. The reaction was carried out in a series of test-tubes, the nature of the catalyst of which was varied. The rate of reaction was measured by the volume of iodine liberated, which was determined by titration with sodium thiosulfate.

13. The thirteenth part of the experiment was devoted to the study of the effect of the nature of the reactants on the rate of reaction. The reaction was carried out in a series of test-tubes, the nature of the reactants of which was varied. The rate of reaction was measured by the volume of iodine liberated, which was determined by titration with sodium thiosulfate.

14. The fourteenth part of the experiment was devoted to the study of the effect of the nature of the solvent on the rate of reaction. The reaction was carried out in a series of test-tubes, the nature of the solvent of which was varied. The rate of reaction was measured by the volume of iodine liberated, which was determined by titration with sodium thiosulfate.

EXCERPTS OF LETTERS

SWITZERLAND AND GERMANY

I have endeavored to quote the most interesting parts of letters received from abroad. It would require too much space to give them completely. This correspondence has been a very delightful part of my work, and my newly made friends have been a real inspiration to me. For the benefit of those who enjoy the German, we have given some of the original, as well as the English, so take your choice.

"Kind messages, that pass from land to land;
Kind letters, that betray the heart's deep history,
In which we feel the pressure of a hand--
One touch of fire--and the rest is mystery!"

This is a part of my first letter from Germany, referred to on page 8. It is from Dr. Waidelich (Oberbürgermeister der Stadt Stuttgart), writing to Rev. Märkt, Evangelical minister, in Aurich. This was for the purpose of seeing what history of the Liebendörfer family was given in the church records.

February 27, 1936: "Eine Frau L. M. Liebendörfer-Park in Lincoln (Nebraska, Vereinigte Staaten von Amerika) hat sich mit dem in Abschrift beiliegenden Schreiben an mich gewandt, in welchem sie um Auskunft über Angehörige der Familie Liebendörfer bittet.....Deutschland ein Interesse daran besteht, dass die im Ausland lebenden Deutschen und Abkömmlinge von Deutschen ihre Verbindung mit der Heimat pflegen."

"Mrs. L. M. Liebendörfer-Park in Lincoln (Nebraska, U.S.A.), has applied to me in the enclosed letter, in which she requests information concerning relatives of the Liebendörfer family.....Germany is now interested that Germans and German descendants living abroad, keep in touch with the home-land."

February 27, 1936: (Reply from Rev. Märkt to Dr. Waidelich) "Es ist für uns von grösstem Interesse, dass Glieder der Familie Liebendörfer auch im Ausland sich noch befinden, und dass diese den Wunsch haben, mit der deutschen Heimat die Fühlung nicht zu verlieren."

"It is of the greatest interest to us, that there are still members of the family of Liebendörfer, abroad, and that these have the desire not to lose contact with their German native-land."

1. The first part of the report is a general statement of the purpose and scope of the study. It states that the purpose is to determine the effect of the new tax law on the income of individuals and that the scope is limited to the year 1965.

1. The first of these is the fact that the majority of the population of the United States is now living in urban areas. This is a result of the process of urbanization, which has been going on since the beginning of the 20th century. The population of the United States has increased from about 100 million in 1900 to over 200 million in 1950. At the same time, the population of rural areas has decreased from about 100 million in 1900 to about 50 million in 1950. This has led to a concentration of the population in urban areas, which has had a profound effect on the economy and society.

Dr. Waidelich then wrote to me, March 12, 1936, enclosing the above letters, and said: "Auf Ihre Anfrage vom 5.2.1936, betreffend die Familie Liebendörfer. Das Ergebnis der von mir angestellten Ermittlungen ersehen Sie aus dem in der Beilage in Abschrift enthaltenen Briefwechsel zwischen mir und dem Evang. Pfarramt in Grossglattbach bei Vaihingen a.d. Enz (Württemberg). Soweit Sie noch weiterer Auskunft bedürfen, würde ich Ihnen empfehlen, sich an das Evang. Pfarramt in Grossglattbach zu wenden."

"In answer to your request of February 5, 1936, concerning the family of Liebendörfer, I have made several inquiries. From the enclosed copy of letters exchanged between myself and the Protestant Pastorate in Grossglattbach near Vaihingen, on the Enz river, (Württemberg), you may see the results of my investigation. If you are in need of further information, I should recommend that you get in touch with the Protestant Pastorate, who lives in Grossglattbach."

June 25, 1936: (To L.M.L.P. from Rev. Albert Widmann, Grossglattbach, Germany) "Als Beilagen übersende ich Ihnen einen Familienregistrauszug über den 1817 nach Amerika ausgewanderten älteren Joh. Jak. Liebendörfer, dazu 4 Blätter, auf denen ich aus den ältesten Tauf-, Ehe- und Totenregistern (Familienregister gab es zu dieser frühen Zeit noch nicht) die erreichbaren Angaben über seine Vorfahren in 4 Generationen zusammengestellt habe. Besonders bemerkenswert ist dabei, dass der Name der Familie ursprünglich als "Dübendörffer" erscheint, so dass Ihre Erklärung als "Lover of a Village" den ursprünglichen Sinn des Namens wohl nicht ganz treffen dürfte; wie dieser Name dann zu erklären ist, weiss ich allerdings auch nicht; vielleicht stammt er von einem Ortsteil, in dem die Familie wohnte, ähnlich wie in derselben frühen Zeit ein Familienname "Oberdörffer" auftaucht, der wohl daher zu erklären ist, dass diese Familie im "Oberdorf", das heisst im oberen Teil des Dorfes ihren Sitz hatte; so könnte der Name Dübendörffer (das ist aber nur eine sehr ungewisse Vermutung von mir) vielleicht bedeuten, dass die Familie in einem "jenseitigen" Teil des Dorfes, etwa über dem Bach "drüben", gewohnt hat. Wie gesagt, diese Erklärung ist eine reine Vermutung von mir, ohne jeden Anspruch, die richtige zu sein..... Von Ihrem Urgrossvater leben natürlich hier keine Nachkommen mehr; aber auch die übrige Familie, aus der J.J.L. stammte, ist fast völlig ausgestorben; hier leben überhaupt keine männlichen Nachkommen mehr aus dieser Linie, nur in Enzweihingen und Kleinglattbach (beide bei Vaihingen an der Enz) lebt noch heute eine Familie, die von einem Vetter des obigen J.J.L. abstammt; wenn Sie Interesse daran haben, bin ich gerne bereit, Ihnen darüber Familienregistrauszüge zu schicken, aus denen die Namen der Familien und Ihre Abstammung von Ihren Vorfahren hervorgehen."

"I am enclosing excerpts from the family register about Johannes Jakob Liebendörfer, who emigrated to America, in 1817, and also 4 pages, upon which I have assembled all the available information about his ancestors, for four generations back, from the oldest baptismal, marriage, and death records (there were no family registers at that early date). Of special interest, is the fact that the family name was originally "Dübendörffer", so that your explanation of "Lover of a Village" does not cover the original meaning of the name. How the name "Dübendorffer" is to be explained, however, I cannot say. Perhaps it is derived from the part of the village in which the family lived, just as in the case of the family name of Oberdörffer. This family name was perhaps derived from the fact that the family lived in the upper part of the village (over-upper; dörf-village). In like manner, the name Dübendorffer might signify that the family lived in a "yonder" part of the village; "yonder" meaning on the other side of the village. This is however only a pure guess on my part, without the least claim to correctness.....There are no descendants of your great grandfather living here; and the rest of the family from which J.J.L. descended, has died out almost entirely. There are no male descendants of this branch living here. But in each of the towns of Enzweihingen and Kleinglattbach (both near Vaihingen, on the Enz river) there is a family who are descendants of a cousin of Johann Jakob Liebendörfer. If you should be interested, I will be glad to send you extracts from the family register, giving the names of the families, and the line of their descent from your forebears."

You can scarcely imagine the joy within my soul, when I received the family records from Germany.

October 21, 1936: (To L.M.L.P. from Rev. Widmann, now at Calw, Germany) "Dieser Herr vermutete übrigens an Hand von Urkunden, dass die ganze Familie Liebendörfer aus der Schweiz eingewandert ist..... Im Jahre 1934 wurde die jüngere der beiden Kirchen in Grossglattbach, die aus dem Jahre 1403 stammende Markuskirche, mit grossen Kosten erneuert, Von daher ist die Kirchengemeinde noch mit grossen Schulden belastet."

"This man I spoke of, found out from certain records, that the entire family of Liebendörfer came from Switzerland.....In 1934, the younger of the two churches in Grossglattbach, built in 1403, St. Mark's Church, was modernized, with a great deal of expense. Because of this, the parish is burdened with a great debt."

This present generation of the Liebendörfer family attend church in St. Mark's Church, now, in 1937. I hope I may sometime attend services, there, where grandfather Liebendörfer and the many other relatives worshipped.

October 31, 1936: (To L.M.L.P. from Dr. Theophilus Liebendörfer, Wilhelmsdorf, Germany) "My father is living in the same village, in which I am doctor of Medicine; is 81 years old, and the eldest representative of the family of Liebendörfer, known to us.....But there are other members in America, two nieces of mine, Gabriella and Ruth Liebendörfer, who embarked for New York, last spring. They are living with their mother, who is a manufacturer of children's clothes, at Long Beach, Long Island, State of New York, 45 Indiana Avenue."

November 27, 1936: (To L.M.L.P. from Stadtvikar Widmann) "Wenn Sie zu uns herüberkommen werden, werden Sie in ein ruhiges, geordnetes Land kommen, das seine Gäste wohl zu empfangen weiss.....Die Markus-kirche in Grossglattbach wurde, so viel ich weiss, schon lange vor allem zu den Hauptgottesdiensten benützt, die ältere Petruskirche (man weiss nicht, wann sie gebaut worden ist) zu den Neben- und Wochengottesdiensten, in den frühesten Zeiten mag es wohl so gewesen sein, dass das Dorf unter die beiden Kirchen aufgeteilt war, so dass zu dem einen Teil des Dorfes die Petruskirche, zum andern die Markuskirche gehörte. Dass überhaupt in dem kleinen Dorf zu 2 auswärtigen Herrschaften gehört hat. Zu der Zeit aber, wo Ihre Vorfahren in Grossglattbach lebten, wurden wohl beide Kirchen von allen benützt. Heute dient die Petruskirche, abgesehen vom Kindergottesdienst, nicht mehr kirchlichen Zwecken, sondern nur noch die sehr schön hergerichtete Markuskirche."

"If you were to come over here, you would come into a quite well ordered land, which well knows how to receive its guests.....St. Mark's Church, in Grossglattbach, as far as I know, has been used for a long time, for all the chief religious services. The older, St. Peter's Church (no one knows how long ago it was built) is used for weekly services and other services. In the earliest times, it may well have been that the village was divided between the two churches, so that St. Peter's Church belonged to one part of the village, and St. Mark's to the other part. The reason that such a small village has two churches, dates from the time, long ago, when the village belonged to two foreign governments. However, at the time when your ancestors lived in Grossglattbach, both churches were used by everyone. Today, St. Peter's Church is used only for children's services, and the very beautifully arranged church of St. Mark's, serves for all general church purposes."

January 9, 1937: (To L.M.L.P. from Gabriella Liebendörfer, Long Beach, New York) "While I was in Germany, last February, for a brief stay, I visited my grandfather, Mr. Wilhelm Liebendörfer, formerly of Wain, now living in Wilhelmsdorf, Württemberg. He told me the very interesting fact, that he had proof that we have relatives living in Nebraska. You can imagine how very much interested I was to hear of this, as my mother, sister, and I, too, have been living in America, since 1922." (Present address: Deer Haunt Park Lodge, Box 142, Croton-on-Hudson, New York.)

It was a great delight to me when I received this letter from Gabriella. I felt as though Germany were coming much nearer to me.

February 8, 1937: (To L.M.L.P. from the father of Doctor Theophilus Liebendörfer, at Wilhelmsdorf, Germany) "I am overjoyed to learn that the succeeding generations of the family of Liebendörfer, as well as their ancestors, from the beginning, have been industrious citizens and upright Christians, trusting in the laws of God. Grossglattbach, the ancestral home of our family, was a very familiar place to me in my earlier years."

This dear elderly gentleman sent me a picture of himself and his daughter. He is in his 82nd year.

1. The first part of the document is a letter from the President of the United States to the Congress, dated January 3, 1862. The letter is addressed to the Senate and the House of Representatives. The President discusses the state of the Union and the progress of the war against the Confederacy. He mentions the recent victories of the Union forces and the importance of maintaining the Union. The letter is signed by Abraham Lincoln.

March 4, 1937: (To L.M.L.P. from Stadtvikar Widmann) "Nun kann ich Ihnen endlich die beiden Aufnahmen von Grossglattbach übersenden .....das leider keine neueren mehr besorgen konnte; so muss ich Sie bitten, mit diesen beiden alten Aufnahmen vorlieb zu nehmen. Das Bild der Markuskirche stammt aus der Zeit vor der gründlichen Erneuerung im Jahre 1934; das äussere Ansehen der Kirche hat sich allerdings damals nicht sehr verändert, so dass Sie trotzdem einen ziemlich wahrheitsgetreuen Eindruck vom heutigen Zustand der Kirches bekommen; nur der Weg, der von der Strasse zur Kirche führt, ist jetzt durch ein Tor abgeschlossen und mit Rosenbeeten eingefasst, die den ganzen Sommer hindurch wunderschön blühen und duften. Das andere Bild stellt die Mitte von Grossglattbach dar; Grossglattbach liegt in einem engen, lieblichen Tälchen ganz versteckt; das erste, was von dem Dorf beim Herankommen zu sehen ist, ist meist der Turm der Petruskirche ist also die ältere der beiden Kirchen, der Turm trägt noch die Glocken. Rechts von der Kirche ist das Armenhaus, links das Schulhaus. Auf gleicher Höhe mit der Petruskirche, nur ziemlich weit links am Ende des Dorfes, liegt dann die Markuskirche. Der Pfeil am Rande weist auf das Pfarrhaus hin, dessen Giebelseite teilweise zu sehen ist.....Wappen (das ist doch wohl gemeint mit dem Ausdruck "coat of arms") gibt es bei vielen deutschen Familien; ob die Familie Liebendörfer ein Wappen geführt hat, ist mir nicht bekannt."

St. Mark's Evangelical Church
Grossglattbach, Württemberg, Germany

A faint, stylized illustration of a landscape. In the center, there is a building with a tall, pointed roof, possibly a church or a tower. To the left of the building, there are several large, leafy trees. To the right, there are more trees and a path that leads towards the building. The entire illustration is rendered in a simple, sketchy style with light lines.

U.S. DEPARTMENT OF THE ARMY
OFFICE OF THE CHIEF OF STAFF
WASHINGTON, D. C.

"Now, I can at last send you two pictures of Grossglattbach.....I am sorry that I cannot furnish any more recent ones, so I must ask you to be content with these two old ones. The picture of St. Mark's Church dates back to the time before its thorough remodeling, in 1934. The outside appearance of the Church has not changed very much since that time, so a fairly trustworthy idea of the appearance of the Church, today, may be gained, even from this old picture. The road which leads from the street to the Church, is now enclosed, and can be entered only through a gate. It is bordered with rose beds, which bloom all summer long, and give forth wonderful fragrance. The other picture shows Grossglattbach, which lies in a narrow, lovely valley, entirely hidden; the first thing which is seen on one's arrival at the village, is the tower of St. Peter's Church, which rises just over the horizon. This St. Peter's Church is the older of the two churches, and its tower still has the bells. At the right of the church, is the poorhouse, and to the left, is the schoolhouse. On the same height as St. Peter's Church, only considerably further to the left, at the end of the village, lies St. Mark's Church. The arrow in the margin, shows the parsonage, of which the gable side of the roof is partly seen.....As to the escutcheon, which you mention, many German families have them; but whether or not the family of Liebendörfer has a coat-of-arms, I do not know."

It was a real thrill to receive these pictures of Grossglattbach, Germany, the birthplace of many of our ancestors.

March 25, 1937: (To L.M.L.P. from Albert Widmann, Calw, Germany)
 "Ganz zufällig las ich eben in einem Zeitungsblatt den Namen eines schweizerischen Militärflugplatzes "Dübendorf" und möchte Ihnen diese Entdeckung gleich mitteilen, da Sie dadurch in Ihrer Ahnenforschung vielleicht etwas vorwärtskommen könnten. Erinnern Sie sich noch, dass im Grossglattbacher Kirchenbuch der Name ursprünglich "Dübendörffer" hiess? In dem schweizerischen Orte Dübendorf dürfen wir nun wohl die Heimat des ganzen Geschlechts erblicken."

"It happened that I came across in a newspaper, the name of a Swiss aerodrome, "Dübendorf", and I am sending this discovery immediately to you, so by this means you may make some further progress in your investigation. You remember, don't you, that in the Grossglattbach Church Register, the original name appears as "Dübendörffer"? Perhaps we may now discover in this Swiss town of Dübendorf, the ancestral home of the entire family."

 "Ich weiss nur von einem Dr. Liebendörfer, Missionsarzt bei der Baslermission, der vor einer Anzahl Jahren gestorben ist, und über den die Basler Mission ein Lebensbild herausgegeben hat."

"I know only of a Dr. Liebendörfer, a missionary at Basler-mission, who has been dead for a number of years, and concerning whom the Basler Mission has published a biographical description."

I wrote for the biography, and received a copy through the courtesy of Rev. Friedrich Liebendörfer, a nephew of the medical missionary, Dr. Liebendörfer.

April 20, 1937: (To L.M.L.P. from Albert Widmann, Calw, Germany)
 "Den Bericht über Rapp etc., den Sie in freundlicher Weise beileigten, habe ich mit grossem Interesse gelesen; ich kenne ja das Dorf Iptingen, von dem die Bewegung ihren Ausgang nahm, selber - es ist das nächste Nachbardorf von Grossglattbach; ich war einige Male dort im Pfarrhaus, habe auch schon zweimal dort Gottesdienst gehalten; es ist sehr fein, wenn man dann eine solche Bewegung auch im andern Erdteil drüben weiterverfolgen kann. Ganz zufällig sah ich heute einen alten Stich, der einige Ansiedler, ich glaube aus Economy, darstellt; auf jeden Fall sind es Anhänger Rapps.

"Und nun noch einiges zur Kirchengeschichte von Grossglattbach, soweit ich sichere Feststellungen machen konnte. Das Dorf Grossglattbach gehörte schon sehr bald unter die Herrschaft des weitberühmten Klosters Maulbronn, das von Grossglattbach nicht sehr weit entfernt ist - ich selber war 2 Jahre lang in der evangelischen Klosterschule in Maulbronn. Im Jahre 1504 kam das Gebiet des Klosters Maulbronn, damit also auch Grossglattbach, zum Herzogtum Württemberg; die Geschichte der Einführung der Reformation in Grossglattbach ist also verknüpft mit der allgemeinen württembergischen Reformationsgeschichte. In Württemberg wurde die Reformation allgemein eingeführt im Jahre 1534. Schon vorher hat es hier und dort in Württemberg evangelische Prediger gegeben, aber das Land war damals nicht unter der Herrschaft des rechtmässigen Landesherrn, des Herzogs Ulrich, sondern dieser war aus dem Land vertrieben, und das Land war unter österreichischer, also katholischer Herrschaft; nachdem Herzog Ulrich das Land im Jahre 1534 zurückerobert hatte, liess er sofort im ganzen Lande die Reformation durchführen - also wohl auch in Grossglattbach. Nun kam allerdings im Jahre 1548 das sogenannte Interim, das ist ein Vertrag durch den die weitere Durchführung der Reformation ausgesetzt wurde, bis eine allgemeine Regelung getroffen sei; die Folge war, dass in manchen Gemeinden wieder katholische Priester eingesetzt wurden - das Volk freilich blieb in der Hauptsache bei seinem evangelischen Glauben. Diese Zeit des Interim dauerte bis zum Augsburger Religionsfrieden 1555. Leider haben wir nun aus der Zeit vor dem Interim und während des Interims nur sehr wenig Nachricht über das kirchliche Leben, wir wissen zum Beispiel nur aus sehr wenig Gemeinden die Namen der evangelischen Pfarrer, die vor dem Interim im Amt waren; daran sind wohl gerade die Wirren der Interimszeit schuld; so wissen wir auch aus Grossglattbach nur den Namen des ersten Pfarrers nach dem Interim, obwohl die Reformation auch in Grossglattbach ziemlich sicher sofort im Jahre 1534 eingeführt wurde. Eine weitere Änderung im kirchlichen Leben ist in Grossglattbach nicht eingetreten - der Unterschied zwischen Lutheran Church und Evangelical Church, den Sie erwähnen, besteht bei uns nicht, höchstens in der Weise, dass das Wort "evangelisch" der allgemeinere Begriff ist, der die beiden Richtungen der Lutheraner und der Reformierten (Calvinisten) in sich schliesst. (Bei Ihnen in Nordamerika ist es doch wohl so, dass Lutheran Church und Evangelical Church zwei verschiedene, nebeneinanderstehende Denominationen sind.) Die einzige auffallende Erscheinung im kirchlichen Leben von Grossglattbach sind dann erst die sogenannten

"Separatisten" aus der Zeit um 1800, die entweder direkt zum Iptinger Rapp hielten oder doch ähnliche Wege gingen."

"I have read with great interest the information which you so kindly enclosed, concerning the Rapps. I know the village of Iptingen, from which the movement took its beginning (exodus),--it is the nearest neighbor village to Grossglattbach. I was there for some time in the parsonage, and I have twice held divine service there. It is very interesting to follow out such a movement even into another part of the world. Quite by chance, today, I saw an old engraving representing some old settlers, I believe of Economy; in any case, they are Rapp adherents.

"And now for some of the Church History of Grossglattbach, in so far as I can make accurate statements. The village of Grossglattbach belonged at one time, under the dominion of the famous Maulbronn Monastery, which is not very far from Grossglattbach--I myself was for two years in the evangelical monastery school in Maulbronn. In the year, 1504, the district of the Maulbronn Monastery, and therefore along with it, Grossglattbach, came into the duchy of Württemberg. The history of the introduction of the Reformation into Grossglattbach is therefore connected with the general history of the Württemberg Reformation. In Württemberg, the general Reformation began in the year, 1534. Already here and there in Württemberg before this, there had been Evangelical preachers, but the country was not at that time under the dominion of its legal sovereign, Duke Ulrich, but was a part of the land conquered by Austria, and therefore was under Catholic dominion. When Duke Ulrich reconquered the land, in the year 1534, he immediately permitted the Reformation to be promoted through the entire country, including, of course, Grossglattbach. Now, to be sure, in the year, 1548, came the so-called Interim, which was a treaty according to which the further extension of the Reformation would be deferred, until a general agreement might be reached. The result was that in many communities the Catholic priests were re-instated, although the people, of course, remained in essentials in their own Evangelical belief. This time of the Interim lasted until the religious peace of Augsburg, in 1555. Unfortunately now, from the time before the Interim and during the Interim, we have very little information about the life of the church. We know, for example, from only a very few communities, the names of the Evangelical pastors who were in office before the Interim. For this, the confusion of the time of the Interim was to blame. So we know from Grossglattbach, only the name of the first pastor after the Interim, although the Reformation, even in Grossglattbach, had begun immediately, securely, and moderately, in the year, 1534. A further change in the life of the church did not occur in Grossglattbach. The separation between the Lutheran Church and the Evangelical Church, which you mention, does not exist with us. At most, the difference is only this, that the word, "Evangelical", is the more general term, which includes the two directions of the Lutheran and the Reformed (Calvinistic). (With you in North America, it is true that the Lutheran and the Evangelical Church are two distinct but similar denominations.) The only peculiar phenomena in the life of the Church of Grossglattbach, from this time on till 1800, were the so-called Separatists, who either directly supported the Iptingen Rapp, or went in a similar direction."

In the year, 1779, a Hans Dübendorfer, a boy of seventeen and one-half years, was chosen for the school-master of Opfikon. The Dübendorfers came from Baltenswil, a small village of the community of Bassersdorf, of which the entire population bore the name, Dübendorfer. ## HISTORICAL SKETCHES

These historical sketches have been gathered from many sources. We, who "carry on" today, may well be proud of our ancestors, and the large part which they have contributed towards building the industrial and professional life of our great American nation. It has been not only a great part, but a most noble and honorable one, as well.

We have made no attempt at a chronological classification of these sketches. A few of them are concerning people who are not in our family lineage. The most of them are taken from letters we have received during this genealogical research; pamphlets which have been written concerning our family; and portions from historical books and encyclopedias, which include important things about some of our ancestors.

Tyrker was the first German to come to America. He was a friend of Leif Ericson, and came over with that expedition. He was the first man, it is said, to discover edible grapes in America. The country of Wineland or Vinland, near Labrador, where Tyrker first found grapes growing, was so named because of this circumstance.

To a German, named Martin Behaim, is ascribed the making of the most interesting relic of the cosmographic art, prior to the discovery of America. It is a globe, representing the shape of the earth, as he believed it to be, and was fashioned in 1491, when most people thought the earth was a flat surface.

Although Behaim was a native of Nuremberg, Germany, born in 1459, he at one time served the king of Portugal. He was a personal friend of Columbus, whom he probably met in Lisbon, between 1480 and 1484. Behaim was also acquainted with Magellan.

The globe above mentioned, is still preserved in Nuremberg, which is one of the most historic cities of Germany.

*****

The city of Rothenburg ob der Tauber, Bavaria, Germany, has been set apart by the German government as a memorial of medieval history. The town has remained the same for hundreds of years. The ancient fortifications and walls still surround the city. The old cobble stone streets and stone houses remain in their original state. Ancient customs, industries, and colorful medieval costumes still prevail. It is a mecca for tourists, and accommodations for visitors provide the only modern touch.

Great waves of German immigration to America did not appear until the 18th century.

1. The first step in the process of identifying a problem is to define the problem. This involves identifying the symptoms of the problem and determining the scope of the problem. Once the problem has been defined, the next step is to identify the causes of the problem. This involves identifying the factors that are contributing to the problem and determining the underlying causes. Once the causes have been identified, the next step is to develop a plan of action. This involves identifying the steps that need to be taken to solve the problem and determining the resources that will be needed to implement the plan. Finally, the last step in the process is to implement the plan and monitor the results. This involves putting the plan into action and tracking the progress of the solution to ensure that the problem is solved.

From "In Swabia-Land" (by Laura Maxwell, Honeyman & Co., Plainfield, New Jersey), we learn how Württemberg, Germany, came to be so called.

At the top of Rothenberg (near the modern town of Rottenburg), which is on an eminence rising from the bank of the Neckar River, near the center of the realm, stood in medieval times, the Castle of a Swabian Count, so hospitable and generous, that he was given the title, "Wirth-auf-dem-Berg" (Host on the Hill). It became the title of his family, and later of the kingdom. The area of Württemberg, Germany, is 7,528 square miles. It would compare closely in area with our state of New Jersey or with Massachusetts. The state of Pennsylvania is almost six times larger than Württemberg, Germany.

Württemberg Province, in Germany, has many wonderful old castles. I do not know how many. Some important ones are Hohentübingen Castle, near Tübingen; and Lichtenstein Castle, near Nebelhöhle.

Did you ever play a harmonica or "mouth organ"? Of course, every boy has! Do you know that the largest harmonica factory in the world is located in "der vaterland", in Württemberg, Germany? It is situated in the city of Trossingen. Ninety-five per cent of all "mouth organs" come from Germany.

Matthew Hohner was the founder of this manufacturing firm. During its first year, 1857, they made and sold 650 mouth harps or "organs". Seventy years later (1927), their production for the year, was in round numbers, 21,000,000 of these harps, besides tens of thousands of accordions and reed harmoniums. Within less than two years, more than 3000 mouth-organ orchestras have come into existence in Germany, and many of them have been organized in the United States. These orchestras are largely in the schools. The harmonica is regarded as a most valuable musical educator for the youth.

It will interest you to know that Ulm is the second largest city of Württemberg, Germany, being 58 miles southeast of Stuttgart, the capital of the province of Württemberg. Ulm is situated on the left bank of the Danube River. On the Bavarian side of the river is New Ulm. There, you will find a great Protestant cathedral, which is remarkable for its architectural beauty, ranking next to the Cathedral of Cologne, which is the largest Church in Germany.

The German people are by nature a religious people. The earliest history of their worship, like that of other European people, was clouded by superstition. The "Black Forest", near Tübingen, has a mysterious and solemn aspect, even weird, at nightfall. Many of the native Germans believed this massive dark forest to be the home of elves and trolls. Not only children, but grown folks, used to believe in witches and ghosts. There are many interesting tales of those early days.

We have learned a great deal about the church of our ancestors in Germany, especially through excerpts taken from letters which I have received from Rev. Albert Widmann, Stadtvikar, who is stationed at Bad Liebenzell, Germany. On page 66, is a splendid historical resume concerning the church of our forefathers, in Grossglattbach, Germany. It seems that not many of the American descendants, today, are members of the Evangelical Church. I think you will appreciate a brief sketch about this church, of which my grandfather, Johann Jacob Liebendörfer, III, was a minister.

The following quotations are from the 1933 Evangelical Church Year Book: "Evangelicals have a unique history. Each chapter glows with the light of a deep religious experience. Our church stands out like a storm-swayed oak that has come up through more than a century's growth. The strength of the winds has crept into the fibre of the oak. There it stands, a picture of strength and beauty. The dove of peace flutters among its topmost branches. Songs emanate from its jubilant foliage, while it furnishes shelter for way-worn travellers."

I have a copy of a fascinating record concerning the organization of the Evangelical Church in North America. I am sure you will agree with me that this word picture, so full of metaphorical figures, is beautiful. Here it is:

"In the spring of 1805, Jacob Albright, John Walter, and George Miller made an evangelistic tour to New Berlin, Pennsylvania, and vicinity. Michael Maize entertained the triumvirate, and was the committee on arrangements. An appointment was made for John Walter to preach in the schoolhouse at New Berlin. Opposition to this rose to such an extent, as to lock the schoolhouse against Walter. But the heroic preacher was undismayed. He came to the schoolhouse, and took his position in front of it, using the door for a sounding-board, and preached one of his great sermons.

"It was a moonlight night. A large crowd of people had gathered. The occasion was exciting. Interest was at high tension. There were some thunderbolts in his message that evening. It was an unusual sermon. It had in it the mutterings of a Mt. Sinai, the echoes of a Mt. Carmel, and the whisperings of a Mt. Calvary. Through his effort, there played in and out, the lightnings of Christ's temple-polemics, the powers of Paul's philippics, the invectives of a John the Baptist, and the smooth eloquence of an Apollos. In the course of his effective message, Walter rose to a high pitch of eloquence and reached such a summit of sermonic dynamics, as to cause a remarkable thrill to come over the speaker and his audience. He seemed to be caught up into the prophetic realm. On those seraphic heights, Walter seemed to be at home, and rose on tiptoes to scan the skyline of the future, and in the very climax of his German sermon, cried out, with a loud voice: "God has opened unto us a door in New Berlin, and He will establish His work here, in spite of all the opposition of hell and wicked men". Just then, the cross-barred door back of him, flew wide open, in a miraculous manner. A revival broke out, and a class (church) was organized. This prophecy became history."

Just a mile and one-half east of New Berlin, Pennsylvania, the first German camp meeting in America, was held in the year, 1810, by Evangelical Church people. It was located on the farm of Michael Maize, the first class leader west of the Susquehanna River. Here, the first Church lot was purchased, in 1815, and the first little log Church was built, in 1816. The building was dedicated March 2, 1817, and not far from that spot, the first missionaries were sent out to Ohio.

No doubt, Nebraska, my present home, and other middle-west states, were considered as the "jumping off" place, at that time, and evangelism at that distance was not a practical venture, in those early days.

Pennsylvania

Pennsylvania, the early home of the Liebendörfer family in North America, is one of the thirteen original states of the Union. From its position, located at the center of the arch formed by these early states, it is popularly known as the "Keystone State".

Formerly, the state was literally covered with forests of hemlock, white pine, spruce, poplar, oak, elm, basswood, etc.. These, along with its mountains, the Appalachians, and its principal rivers, the Susquehanna, Monongahela, Ohio, and Delaware, and many other beautiful streams, provided picturesque sites of homes.

The first white settlement in Pennsylvania, was made by Swedes, about 1637. When King Charles granted the territory to William Penn, in 1681, Penn proceeded to organize the colony on Quaker principles. Possibly, principles of peace were a little out of order among savages, but the experiment was successful. Colonists came from Wales, England, Germany, and Switzerland. There were 25,000 white settlers, within less than 20 years. Germans from the Rhine, came in great numbers. At the beginning of the Revolutionary War, there were about 300,000 people in the colony, one-third of whom were Germans.

The practicality of locating in Pennsylvania is evidenced by the following. Pennsylvania leads the Middle Atlantic and New England states in poultry raising. Manufacturing is extensive. It is first in the United States, in the production of minerals--coal, cement, clay, iron, and petroleum leading. Since 1756, it has led the United States in producing iron and steel. Fully half the coal mined in the United States comes from Pennsylvania. The Keystone State has only one-half of one per cent of the world's population; but it produces about 16 % of the world's pig iron and coal.

Under date of September 9, 1937, I have information from the Department of Internal Affairs for Pennsylvania, located at Harrisburg, the capital, that the land now known as Wurttemberg, Pennsylvania, located in Butler County, was originally part of a tract, the warrant for which was granted August 9, 1773, to the trustees of the Washington Academy. Patent was given July 17, 1779. Under an Act of Assembly, September 24, 1788, the Washington Academy had a grant of 3000 acres.

The following items are from the Lawrence and Butler County, Pennsylvania, historical records, on file in the capital, at Harrisburg, Pennsylvania.

Wurttemberg, Pennsylvania, was always regarded as a progressive place. Its transition from pioneer days was rapid, and its improvements were of a permanent character. Wayne township, in which it is located, with an area of 11,500 acres, was blessed with almost inexhaustible agricultural and mineral resources.

The greater part of the land in Wayne township was divided into 400 acre tracts, each settler being entitled to one-half for locating. The first settler, where Wurttemberg now stands, was probably Ananias Allen, who came about 1796-97, and built a grist-mill of logs. It had one run of country stone, called a "bull-head".

In 1821, a salt well was put down about 500 feet, by Matheny and Hemphill. It was worked for nine years, producing about two barrels of salt, per day. The well was abandoned because of oil, and the scarcity of water. Coal was discovered by James Dobbs, near Wurttemberg, about 1826. Nearly every farm in the township has probably been underlaid with coal of good quality. A three-foot vein, with about twenty-eight inches of coal, is the average, the rest being mixed with slate.

Johann Jakob Liebendörfer, Jr., and his family, came from Germany in 1817, and after a short residence in Philadelphia, settled in Greensburg, Westmoreland County, Pennsylvania. From there, they moved to Butler County, and after a few years (in 1829), came to Wurttemberg. The Liebendörfers first lived in a log cabin, put up by an early settler, named Smith.

In 1831, a grist-mill, with two run of country stone, or "bull-heads", was built by Johann Jakob Liebendörfer, Jr., and his son, Michael. After the father died, Robert Mehard, a brother-in-law of Michael, became his partner. They installed a pair of French burrs. Later, Robert Mehard became sole proprietor. A saw-mill and linseed oil mill were built by Johann Jakob Liebendörfer, Jr., Daniel Liebendörfer, Frederick Rapp, and Peter Noss, about the same time that the grist-mill was built (1831). After about twenty years, the mill race gave way; then these mills were abandoned.

An United States Post Office was established at Wurttemberg, Pennsylvania, about 1845. Both the post office and the town were named Wurttemberg from the fact, that the Liebendörfer family had come to America from Württemberg, Germany, and this family and other families, into which they intermarried, had founded the town of Wurttemberg, Pennsylvania. "The first postmaster of whom we find mention, was Frederick Rapp. He was second to fill that office, and was followed by Ebert and Brown. (The statements which follow concerning the post-office, would indicate that the official government fixtures for the mail, were transferred, as a matter of convenience for the postmaster, to his location in business.) The post office was then located on the north side of the creek, later being moved to the south side, into the store of Fleming and Freichtag. James Liebendörfer was the next postmaster, located on the north side; then, Morrison and Fisher, on the south side." In early days, a railroad was extended from New Castle to Wurttemberg, and the town was the commercial center of thrifty business which drew from the community for many miles around.

The first store on the south side of the creek, was opened by three Hyde brothers: John, Joseph, and Thomas. It was later occupied by Morrison and Fisher. The first store on the north side was opened by a man named Vincent. A Mr. Coulter had the second one; Frederick Rapp had the third. Later, Frederick Rapp built the brick hotel, which still stands (1937). It was the first and only hotel ever erected in Wurttemberg. The first blacksmith shop was probably opened by Jacob Weis. J. N. Kirker had a flour and feed store. James H. Newton was proprietor of the largest general store, established in 1900. In 1908, E. G. French worked a stone quarry, employing fourteen men.

Newton's Store, Wurttemberg, Pennsylvania

A frame school house was built about 1832, and a two-story brick school building was erected in 1872, on the north side of the creek. Wurttemberg was an independent school district, with two schools. In 1875, the enrollment was 43 pupils. In 1908, it was 94. Two teachers were employed, at a combined salary of $650. Total school expenses were $826.57. The first floor of the brick school was used for general school purposes, and the second floor was used as a hall for literary programs. This school building is still used (1937).

I would add that among early school teachers, the name of Reed Liebendorfer is well known and revered. He was an outstanding scholar of his day.

The United Presbyterian Church in Wurttemberg was organized in 1859, by Rev. Thomas Guthrie, D.D., who supplied the pulpit for some time. The first regular pastor was Rev. J. H. Peacock, about 1867. The church lot was given by James Mehard, father of Robert, who married Christian Liebendorfer. Services are held regularly at this Church (1937).

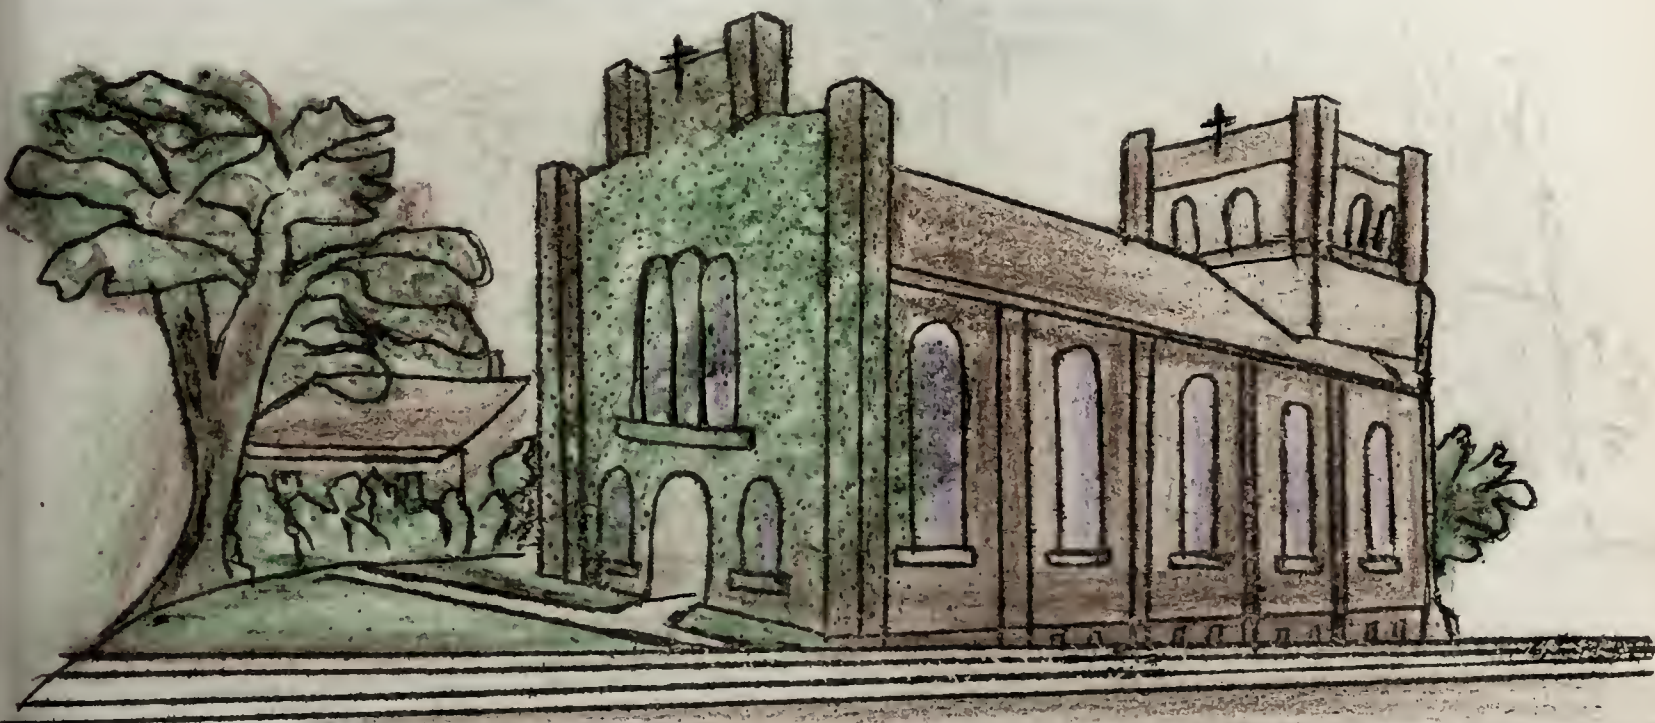

The German Lutheran Church had meetings as early as 1831, in the home of Johann Jakob Liebendorfer, Jr. (my great grandfather), conducted by Rev. Schweitzerbart, pastor at Zelienople. About 1868, a church was built, north of Wurttemberg, on the New Castle road. In 1877, the language question split the congregation.

The Methodists held meetings for some twenty years, and in the summer of 1876, the Centennial Methodist Episcopal Church was erected. Rev. J. S. Ross was its first minister. Grandfather Johann Jacob Liebendorfer, III, donated the land site. Regular services are held at this Church (1937).

Historic "Pine Hill", in Wurttemberg, south of Slippery Rock Creek, has a median height of 400 feet above the surface of the water.

These items give only a small portion of the activities, industries, and work of our ancestors, which helped to make a part of beautiful Pennsylvania more homelike.

St. Paul's German Lutheran Church
Zelienople, Pennsylvania

A faint, dotted-line drawing of a large, multi-story building with a central tower and arched windows, possibly a church or institutional building, with a tree to the right. The drawing is very light and appears to be a watermark or a very faint sketch. The building has a central vertical element that rises above the main roofline, and several arched windows are visible on the lower floors. To the right of the building is a tall, thin tree with a rounded canopy. The entire drawing is composed of small dots, giving it a textured, almost pixelated appearance.

St. Paul's German Lutheran Church, at Zelienople, was organized in 1821 by Rev. Schweitzerbart, who was its pastor for 30 years. This German congregation used to be one of the largest in the country, for a great distance roundabout. (Great grandfather and great grandmother Johann Jakob Liebendörfer, Jr., the "emigrants", with their family, attended here in early days.) This Church is of the Ohio synod. I, (L.M.L.P.), attended Sunday morning service there, July 25, 1937. As you enter the auditorium, two large beautiful windows are on either side. They are a gift from Eva Steffler, in memory of her parents.

These records of baptisms are from the Church Register of the St. Paul German Lutheran Church, at Zelienople, Pennsylvania. Anna Maria, Johann Jacob, Daniel, Wilhelmina, and Christina Liebendörfer were children of Johann Jakob Liebendörfer, Jr., the "emigrant"; all of whom were born in Germany.

Children of George Frederick Rapp & Anna Maria Liebendörfer:

1. Christina, born, 1821; baptized, 1821
2. Ludwig, born, 1821; baptized, 1822
3. Margaret, born, 1822; baptized, 1823
4. Daniel, born, 1829; baptized, 1830
5. Immanuel, born, 1832; baptized, 1832
6. Rachael, born, 1834; baptized, 1834

1. Anna Maria, born, 1826; baptized, ?
2. John Frederick, born, 1830; baptized, ?
3. Marguerite, born, 1832; baptized, ?

Zelienople English Lutheran Church was organized January 7, 1843. Rev. Gottlieb Bassler, who became its first pastor, with Henry Muntz, and Michael Liebendörfer, who were the first elders, served as the active figures in this church organization. Michael Liebendörfer is recorded in the membership as late as 1860.

As the first Lutheran church was organized in 1860, it was the first of its kind in the city. The first pastor was Rev. J. H. Smith, who became the first permanent pastor. He was followed by Rev. J. H. Smith, who were the first pastors of the church. The church was organized as follows:

In Butler County, St. John's Lutheran Church, was composed of both Reformed and Lutheran members, and in early days held services in both German and English. Rev. Moeckenhart was the first Lutheran preacher. There is the record of a baptism at this church, by Rev. Michael J. Steck of Greensburg, Pennsylvania, as early as 1812. Prior to 1820, the early settlers used a log building, (near the spot where the stone church was dedicated in 1831), for both school and church.

Rev. Christian G. Schweitzerbart was the founder of most of the German Churches in this part of the country. He began his ministry here, in 1821. In Butler, Lawrence, and Mercer County, he had eleven preaching appointments, and sometimes made the entire circuit on foot.

Historic Lawrence County, Pennsylvania: President Taylor Visits (Quoted from an old newspaper, 1849)

"New Castle has been noticed by some United States presidents, passed through by others, but one day a real president actually visited the city, and took a sight-seeing trip, as well as entertaining the ladies of the city.

"In 1849, the evening of August 22, at 5:30 p.m., a gun on Shaw Hill, fired a salute. It was the signal that President Zachary Taylor, of the United States, accompanied by Governor Taylor, of Pennsylvania, was about to enter the thriving metropolis of New Castle, then, some 3000 inhabitants, via Erie Express Packet. (Now, 1937, the population is 49,300.)

"There was quite an affair. The president was not rushed to a hotel for a bawth or lemonade, but the grand procession, of which David Craig was chairman, led on horseback; the brass band followed; then, the martial band; then, the president and governor, riding in an open carriage, holding their high stove pipe hats on their arms, and bowing to the cheering crowd of spectators; then, the military escort; and last of all, the citizenry, which included bad boys and numerous dogs, followed the procession.

"The procession moved about the little dusty town on the warm evening, from Jefferson up to East, up to North, and back down to Jefferson again, and then up about to Mill Street. The route is not now sure, but from descriptions which have been left, the course followed, would lead on those streets, it is thought. Following the procession, David Craig made an open air welcome address, to which President Taylor responded.

"Bright and early the next a.m., so records say, the President and party, visited the various industries and parts of the city. The President visited the old Sophia furnace, and stated that it was the first he had ever seen.

"Then, at 9 a.m., the President entertained the ladies of the city, at a reception, which took place in the Presbyterian Church.

John George Rapp, the leader of the "Economites", was born November 1, 1757, at Iptingen, Oberant County, Württemberg, Germany, along the River Enz, very near Grossglattbach. He died at Economy, Beaver County, Pennsylvania, U.S.A., August 7, 1847. His father was a farmer. George was a linen weaver.

In 1783, young Rapp married Christina Benzigen. Their children were:

John, b., Germany, 1783; d., Harmony, Pennsylvania, 1812

Rosina, b., 1786; d., 1834

Frederick Reichert (adopted son), b., Germany, 1775; d., Economy, Pennsylvania, 1834

They had one grandchild, Gertrude, born at Harmony, Pennsylvania, in 1808; died, 1889. She was the daughter of John Rapp.

*****

John George Rapp, leader of the Economites, was an uncle of George Frederick Rapp, who married Anna Maria Liebendörfer, and lived at Württemberg, Pennsylvania.

*****

About the time of the "Louisiana Purchase", John George Rapp and his friends, decided to emigrate from Württemberg, Germany, to Louisiana, America. He was then 46 years old. Later it was thought better to go into the more civilized northeastern part of the Union, and thus planning, he sold his property at Iptingen, Germany, and with 2000 gulden ($800), started for the United States. His son, John, was with him, and they set sail from Amsterdam, July 31, 1803.

*****

The following is a brief summary of the colonizing activities of "Father Rapp", as John George Rapp was called: "Father" John George Rapp came from Germany to America, in 1803, to obtain religious freedom. He purchased 5000 acres of land in the Conoquennessing Valley of Pennsylvania, along with 24 acres in the town of Zelienople, from Dr. Detmar Basse, in 1804. There, he and his followers founded the town of "Harmony", Pennsylvania, where they remained 10 years. This estate, enlarged to 9000 acres of land, and many buildings, with other improvements, was sold to Abraham Zeigler, for $100,000. In 1814, John George Rapp, with his community, removed to Posey County, Indiana, where they founded "Harmonie", Indiana. In 1824, "Father" Rapp sold this estate of 20,000 acres to Robert Owen. It included "Harmonie", which has since been known as "New Harmony". The Rappites then removed to Beaver County, Pennsylvania, and founded "Economy", which is now the fourth ward of "Ambridge", Pennsylvania. On February 15, 1894, the Harmony Society celebrated its 89th anniversary at "Economy", Pennsylvania. Here, the society flourished and declined, being dissolved in 1905.

*****

As far back as 1807, a great number of the Harmonites had lived a celibate life. Later, celibacy was generally adopted, and the Society became a static organization. The Harmonites abstained from smoking tobacco, and drank very little liquor.

*****

A Rappite Watchman's Cry was: "Again a day is past, and a step made nearer our end. Our time runs away and the joys of Heaven are our reward". "Each for all, and all for each, in sickness, in health", was the sentiment of the Economites.

*****

Joseph Smith, the Apostle of Mormonism, came to Harmony, Pennsylvania, and married a Harmony girl, against the will of her parents. The English writer, Harriet Martineau, visited Economy in the early thirties. Rudyard Kipling also visited the community in his early life. Another visitor of distinction, was Duke Bernhard of Saxe-Weimar, Germany. He wrote a very graphic description of his visit. Stephen C. Foster attended school at Harmony, in his youth. And, so, many people of note, may be associated with the old town.

*****

The old Rappite cemetery at Harmony, Pennsylvania, is an undisturbed landmark of the Harmonite Society. It is enclosed by a high stone wall. The cemetery is approached from a narrow dirt road. Following around the wall to the opposite end, the entrance is blocked by a locked, double, revolving, granite gate. Over the gate, in legible German, is a Biblical inscription.

(Over the center of the gateway)

Hier Ruhen 100 mitglieder der Harmonie Gesellschaft Gestorben von 1805 Bis 1815.

Here are resting 100 members of the Harmony Colony. They died from 1805 to 1815.

I know that my Redeemer liveth and that He shall stand at the latter day upon the earth. (Job 19:25) Blessed and holy is he who hath part in the first resurrection. Over these, the second death hath no power, but they shall be priests of God and of Christ, and shall reign with Him a thousand years. (Rev. 20:6) Be thou faithful until death, and I will give thee a crown of life. (Rev. 2:10, latter part)

(Over the left portion of the gateway)

Ich bin die auferstehung und das leben wer an mich glaubt der wird leben of der gleich stürbe. (John 11:25)

1. The first of these is the fact that the German people are not yet fully conscious of the danger which threatens them from the East. They are still under the impression that the German people are the only ones who are threatened by the East. This is a dangerous illusion, and it is one which must be dispelled if the German people are to be able to take the necessary steps to protect themselves.

The stone wall surrounding the cemetery was built in 1869. After you pass through the revolving gate of solid stones, you see only a massive green plot, where graves are not in evidence. There is but one lone stone slab, leaning against the inside of the massive stone wall, which so securely encloses this burial place. Following is the German inscription and translation.

(Inside the cemetery)

Allhier liegt und ruht der Leichnam von Johannes Rapp, welcher, Geboren den 19ten December, 1783, Gestorben den 27sth July, 1812. Hier liegt ein Thon aus Topers Scheibe bisgieyervesung schlessetauf das edie Salz zum neum Leibe der Lebens froh wird siehen auf. (Some of these German words are not in accord with the accepted spelling of today.)

Here lies and rests the body of Johannes Rapp, who was born December 19, 1783, died July 27, 1812. Here lies a piece of potter's clay, until the judgement unlocks the noble spirit, looking forward to a new body and a life of gladness.

The above Johannes Rapp was the only son of John George Rapp, or "Father" Rapp. The gravestone was made without the consent of "Father" Rapp, and he forbade it to be set up. So, it was left face down on his son's grave, until the cemetery was renovated. Then, it was set up against the wall. The cemetery is like a well-kept lawn; no mounds, no flowers, and no monuments. In death, as in life, all Harmonites shared alike.

In June, 1814, when "Father" Rapp went to the place in Indiana, which is now known as New Harmony, he, with 100 others, floated on flat boats down the Ohio River. About two weeks later, they poled up up placid Wabash to the site of their new home in Posey County. To prepare against attacks from river pirates and Indians, the Harmonites built a strong fort. I visited New Harmony, in 1936, and saw the fort, which is still quite well preserved.

The first Rappite Church, erected in Harmonie, Indiana, was a two-story frame structure, built in 1818. It was 75 feet long, 50 feet wide, and 30 feet high. It had a belfry, 20 by 20 feet, with two bells and a clock. The face of the clock was 8 feet in diameter. The bells struck the hours, also the quarter hours, and they could be heard for a distance of seven miles.

In 1822, a new brick church was completed. It was an imposing structure, built in the shape of a Maltese Cross. The main part was 80 feet square, with four wings, each 25 by 50 feet, and two stories in height. The center of the building towered as one story, about 28 feet high. The roof and ceiling were supported by 28 Doric columns, which made arcades for each wing. The pillars were 2 feet in diameter, and made of walnut, cherry, and sassafras wood. Above the main entrance, was carved in the rock, a wreath and rose, also the date, 1820; also these words, from the Lutheran version of the Bible--Micah 4:8, which reads, "Unto thee shall come the golden rose, the first dominion". The carving and gilding is credited to the handiwork of Frederick Reichert Rapp.

*****

The Rapp Cemetery, at Harmonie, Indiana, occupied about two acres, where the Rappites placed their dead, young and old, of high and low birth. A plat which indicated the site of each grave, was retained, but after a burial, the spot was covered with the green sod before the next morning, with nothing left to mark the grave. This was to show equality in death, as in life. In this respect, the plot resembles the Rappite Cemetery at Harmony, Pennsylvania.

*****

At one time, near St. Louis, Missouri, John George Rapp found a large stone slab, 8 by 5 feet, and 8 inches thick, with the impression of two human feet upon it, also a scroll. Science says it is a lime stone of the paleozoic age. Tradition says the footprints were made by the Angel Gabriel, appearing to warn the Rappites of the coming of the end of the world.

*****

In 1824, "Father" Rapp sold the large estate of 20,000 acres of land, including "Harmonie", to Robert Owen, a celebrated social reformer, born at Newtown, Wales, May 14, 1771.

Under a stairway of one of the homes, is an inscription, which was written in chalk, by a departing Rapp. It is these words, which being translated from the German, read: "On the twenty-fourth of May, 1824,

United States government meteorological reports were made in New Harmony. As early as 1826, a rain gauge was place there. It is still in use, (1937). This instrument was made at the national capitol, Washington, D.C., U.S.A., being an exact copy of one at Washington and one in London. So, according to Stedman Whitwell, who made the official reports at that time, "By this uniformity of instruments, comparative quantities of rain which falls at New Harmony, London, and Washington, may be accurately observed".

In 1824, the Rappites returned from Harmonie, Indiana, to Pennsylvania, and founded the town of Economy, in Beaver County, Pennsylvania, on the east bank of the Ohio River, 17 miles northwest of Pittsburgh. Several steamer trips were necessary to transport the colonists and their goods. The final load arrived May 17, 1825, after a twelve-day voyage on the river. This third settlement was named "Economy", from the German word, "Oekonomie", signifying the science and practice of economics. Progress was rapid. By the time the last steamer-load had docked at the wharf below the new town, streets had been laid out, buildings erected, and cultivation of the 3000 acres, begun.

In clearing the land, all nut trees were spared, not only to provide shade, but the Economites made an oil from nut trees, which was used as a food dressing, also for lubricating fine machinery. It was not until about the year 1914, when the Kansas State Agricultural College made the discovery of oil salad dressing, that this use of nut oil became at all general.

*****

By 1832, the main buildings at Economy were completed. Many are in use today, (1937). There are two prominent ones: the Church, known as St. John's Lutheran, today, which may be seen from a great distance, because of the white belfry, and walls of deep red brick. (The Church bell, in the octagonal white belfry, still sounds out the time.) Then, the Great House, just across the street, a 45-room structure, which was the home of "Father" Rapp.

*****

Through the history of more than 100 years, with its three and four generations of human folk, not one of "Father" Rapp's group was ever convicted of a crime.

The spurious "Count de Leon", who was really Bernhart Mueller, led an insurrection against the Harmonites, in 1832. He sought to usurp the leadership of John George Rapp. Although Mueller was unsuccessful, the Harmonite Society was weakened. The death of Frederick Reichert Rapp, in 1834, took from the Society its dominant business personality. "Father" Rapp, the founder, died at Economy, Pennsylvania, in 1847.

Why was our name changed from Dübendorfer to Liebendörfer? Probably there are several correct answers to that question. First, the change gave a more beautiful name when translated into the Swabian language; second, it was not unusual in those days, for an emigrant to change his family name; third, it may have been changed to avoid ridicule. Oftentimes it is embarrassing to move from one country to another one, and appear as a "foreigner", who is seeking a better place. But, you may be sure that a Liebendörfer has the stamina to succeed anywhere. In Switzerland, our name still remains Dübendorfer.

*****

About 1630, in the town of Baltenswil, Switzerland, the entire population bore the name of Dübendorfer. During that year, (at the time of the Thirty Years War), the population changed, following the industrial revolution which was widespread.

Hans Dübendorfer, a boy of  $17\frac{1}{2}$  years, was chosen for the school master of Opfikon, Switzerland (near Zürich), in the year 1779. We do not have his specific family lineage. This same Hans, wrote with his own hand, the calculation for the modern construction of the Clock-tower in Opfikon, built, 1822-23. It stands today (1937), as a memorial to the old chapel, which was used before the Reformation, and was accidentally destroyed by a fire, April 9, 1764. The bells in the tower announce the time of day, and call the people to work. A siren is used when the bells ring a distress call. The houses in the picture, below, are from the year 1764, when a great part of Opfikon was burned. We cannot be sure in which house the Dübendorfer family lived before 1700.

Mr. Hermann Wettstein, a teacher, living at Oberstammheim, Switzerland, has written a "Chronicle of the Parish of Kloten", which was used last year at the 150th anniversary of the Church in Kloten, Switzerland. It is a parish history, giving church activities and relationships over a period covering the last 2000 years. From this "Chronicle", we observe that Alfred Dübendorfer in Gerlisberg, was president of the church wardens (deacons) in the church at Kloten, 1928-1929. Most of the people in Switzerland are Protestant. The region of Zürich is largely populated by Germans. Around Geneva, Switzerland, the French speaking people are in the majority.

February 23, 1937, in a letter to L.M.L.P., Rev. A. D. Gramley, Evangelical Minister, Milton, Pennsylvania, writes, that in Rev. A. Stapleton's Annals, page 364, the following item appears: "The Pittsburgh Conference was held at Rochester, Pennsylvania, on March 12, 1868, with Bishop Joseph Long, presiding, and Rev. J. D. Hollinger serving as secretary. The following were ordained deacons: Revs. E. B. Arthur, J. Arkless, J. L. Bowman, G. Nicholas, J. Liebendörfer*, and G. Phillips".

*This was my Grandfather Liebendörfer. He was a minister of the Evangelical Church of North America. Evidently, from several of his Preaching Licenses, which I have, grandfather served in the Pittsburgh Conference from 1851 to 1868, and longer. The dates of these licenses are as follows:

Evangelical Church: Wayne County, Ohio Yearly Conference, 1851
Pittsburgh Conference, 1853; 1854
Yearly Conference (Pittsburgh), -1855 -
Pittsburgh Conference, 1857; 1860; 1862

Aunt Thusen Elda Liebendörfer, of New Castle, Pennsylvania, remembers Rev. W. W. Orwig, who was president of the Evangelical Conference in 1862, and signed Grandfather's license of that year. Grandfather died very unexpectedly, in 1880, after only a few hours illness. The night preceding, he had visited for a long time with a guest minister, in their home. Apparently he was in usual health. On rising the next morning, grandfather was not well. Illness came on with increasing intensity, and in a short time he realized that his active life on earth

The year, 1839, was a very important year in the history of the Evangelical Church of North America. Rev. W. W. Orwig was editor of "Der Christliche Botschafter". It then cost $1.00, a year. Aunt Thusen Elda recalls that her home folks were subscribers, and they enjoyed this paper very much. The Conference of 1839 instructed Rev. Orwig to publish a German pocket Bible. They also ordered 6000 copies of an elementary text book (of which he was the author), besides large supplies for Sunday Schools. (I read recently from an Evangelical Year Book, that "Der Christliche Botschafter", the official German periodical of the Evangelical Church, is the oldest German publication in America. It was founded in January, 1836. It is now a twenty-four page weekly, with a yearly subscription price of $2.50. There are about 500 subscribers in Europe. Its circulation is approximately 7000.)

I believe you will enjoy portions of letters from Aunt Thusen Elda Liebendörfer. February 10, 1936: "About 1857, I say about 1857, your grandfather was introduced to my mother (it really was earlier, for they two were married September 2, 1856, according to grandfather's record in the old German Bible). Her name was Mary Swineford. (She was grandfather's third wife.) His name was Johann Jacob Liebendörfer, III. Not long after the met, they were married. They each had children, some yet small. Then, the children were taken together, and the family went to the Liebendörfer home to live, and the Swineford home was sold. David Liebendörfer was then a young man, aged about 25 years. The older (Liebendörfer) brothers had gone west to work, and do for themselves.

"Then, one evening, an apparent stranger came to the door. It was already the dusk of the evening. He asked the old gentleman (grandfather) for lodging, and for the night. He was invited in and given a seat. And soon the supper was prepared, and the stranger was invited to the supper table with the family. They asked the blessing, as always, and began partaking. Mother and I were at the table with the rest. She sat across from the stranger, where she could see his face, and Mr. Liebendorfer (grandfather) sat at the end, near her. She then whispered to her husband, in German, "I believe this is one of your boys". The stranger heard her words, for he knew German, and said in German, "Yah es ist" (Yes it is). I tell you there was a time around that table. His father had not seen him for so many years. He did not know his own son. Mother had never seen him before, Daniel, his oldest son (my father)."

February 11, 1936: "Now, Daniel (my father), came from Illinois on an errand of making some money. He had learned that he could yet get Government land, by taking a certain amount, and paying a trifle for it, and staying on it. I forget the amount of time he had to stay on it. Then, he would get a deed for it, and it was his.....Now, Daniel came from Illinois to Pennsylvania, to get his brother David, who was of age, to come to Illinois, to hold land for him.....David did this for Daniel, and was there a long time."

January 31, 1936: "Then, they could get land (in Illinois) almost for nothing yet, and by living on it a certain time, they could get a good title or deed. This, I understood they did, or tried to do, then he (Uncle David) came back to this state (Pennsylvania). Then, he stayed with his father. His father was getting aged. He ran his father's farm, on the shares, and we married in 1860."

June 23, 1936: "My husband's father told how he was a boy about 15 years of age (He was really about twenty years of age.), when his father, mother, and family came over from Germany, together with many near relatives. A number, together, of brothers and sisters, with their families, landed at Philadelphia. There, your grandpa was put in a shop, to learning the trade of making shoes and boots. He said it was in Philadelphia, where bootmaking was first started, and in that shop he learned the trade of making boots; he then made boots and shoes. He made me a pair of calfskin shoes, about the year, 1857. I met a few of them, the relatives, who came to this country when he came. I mean, they came together. But, I never learned what year they came in. There must have been many come together, relatives, and they clung together, and bought a large piece of land on Slippery Rock Creek, and started the village of Wurttemberg, which is there yet."

August 6, 1936: "You mentioned the grasshopper being in the west, so destructive. I remember many years ago, a sister of mine was living there. They, then had the same distress. Brother Frank, whom you met here, went out to his sister's on a visit, and wrote us that the people gathered grasshoppers, and cooked them, and ate them."

This must have been in 1874 to 1876, according to the New Standard Encyclopedia. During those years, the grain crops of Colorado and Nebraska, also neighboring states, were damaged to an extent of many millions of dollars. Thousands of families, so history records, were reduced almost to starvation.

February 4, 1937: "Your grandpa used to tell us, be sure and write your name proper, Liebendörfer, when you write; as that is the way they have it in Germany, and some day there might some help come to you from there, in money, as it is possible some means will come to the friends or relatives of the Liebendörfers, to those who came to America, if proven to be Liebendörfer relatives.....Write me and ask me questions if you think of anything special, Lillie dear, and let me hear from you, often. Each of you be faithful to live for Heaven. Lots of love from Aunt Thusen Elda."

In very early days, stock buyers would come through the country, and purchase cows, horses, or whatever stock they were wanting from the farmers. As the animals were taken from different farms, they were driven down the open road to a large city market. One day, a buyer and another man, came to the home of Aunt Thusen Elda's grandfather, and asked him to go to the stock market with them, so he might be of help in driving the stock. He consented, and went with them, but was never seen again, or heard from by his family. That event was probably between 150 and 200 years ago. Many times, especially in the evening, as the family gathered about the fireplace, they would talk, and wonder what had become of him. Was it foul play from his companions? Were they all attacked and scalped by Indians? Was he stricken with illness, and left along the way to perish?

Speaking of Indians, the oldest of the log cabins, which sheltered some of our ancestors at Wurttemberg, Pennsylvania, and where my father was born, in 1826, was well pierced with Indian arrows, and penetrated by bullets.

It was torn down in February of 1928. Likely it was built at least 172 years previously (about 1756), and probably was the workmanship of French soldiers. In my opinion, it should have been preserved as a memorial to our dauntless ancestors.

In Germany, every man learns a trade, or is educated in some profession. This means that able-bodied men are self-supporting. There are many small villages in Germany, and in these, the trades and professions show no overlapping. The village doctor has no competitor; the school master is the educational director; the weaver does practically all the fine weaving for the various families. Even the shoemaker carries on an exclusive business. Since the eldest son traditionally follows his father's vocation, the continuance of all necessary industries and professions is automatically provided for.

The men of German families receive much more consideration and prominence, than do the women. Because of this fact, it is often difficult to get information about relatives, if the head of the family is not living.

As far as I have ascertained, there are no male descendants of our great grandfather, Johann Jakob Liebendörfer, Jr., now living in his birth place of Grossglattbach. We do have relatives living (June 25, 1936 was the date of this bit of information) in the towns of Kleinglattbach and Enzweihingen, Germany. Both towns are near Vaihingen, on the Enz River, and in each one resides a family, who are descended from a cousin of Johann Jakob Liebendörfer, Jr.. This is the direct line of the "emigrant". We have many other Liebendörfer relatives in Europe. It seems that the line of Liebendörfers living today in Grossglattbach, goes back to the village of Schmie, near Grossglattbach.

It is certain that many American towns have their "source" towns located somewhere in Europe. Sometimes it is a simple process to find them; sometimes it is a well nigh impossible task. The interim between the time of the history desired, and the present day, makes this vast and variable degree of difficulty in obtaining authentic information.

Some of the principal "source towns" in Germany for the Liebendörfer family, are Grossglattbach, Stuttgart, Kleinglattbach, Schmie, Tübingen, Enzweihingen, and Wilhelmsdorf. Some of the principal "source towns" in Germany for the Rapp family, are Iptingen and Nusdorf. In Switzerland, the following are "source towns" for our lineage: Burgdorf, Dübendorf, Zürich, Basel, Kloten, Baltenswil, Gerlisberg, and Opfikon. I am of the opinion that we also have branches of our family lines in India, Italy, Wales, France, and England.

Of United States inhabitants born in foreign countries, one nation, only, has a larger number than Germany. That is Italy, with 1,790,429. Fifty-eight and three-tenths per cent of our 1,608,814 inhabitants born in Germany, came to America, during or before 1900. Only 17.8 % of the United States population born in Italy, came to America during or before 1900.

From this, it is clear that the German born population of the United States has contributed largely to the pioneer period of development and expansion of our country.

Most of our families in America, have taken very active part in the religious life of their respective communities. In many ways, they have contributed to the spiritual welfare of places in the East, West, North, and South.

"Family worship" used to be a part of every day's activities in the homes of our ancestors. There were very few homes that did not take time for it. What a worthy example was set for you and me!

*****

Aunt Thusen Elda Liebendörfer, in her 98th year, told me last summer (1937), of an incident in her home, when a certain minister was a guest. As breakfast was announced, Auntie put eggs on the stove to steam, while the family had their usual morning worship. After worship, the breakfast was served, and the eggs were pronounced, "Just right!" The preacher asked Auntie how she had cooked them so perfectly. She explained, and he said, "How can those families who have no worship, know how long to cook the eggs for breakfast?"

"Like leaves on trees the race of man is found;
Now green in youth, now withering on the ground;
Another race the following spring supplies;
They fall successive and successive rise;
So generations in their course decay,--
So flourish these, when those have passed away."

It is inspiring to have so many evidences of Christian faith, and service in the lives of our people, as are shown from letters which we have received from time to time. I will tell you about some of them. Of course there are many many others, perhaps some in your home, but I can only relate what has been told or written to me.

"Aunt Maggie", who was Margaret Liebendörfer Hill, born August 29, 1837, in Wurttemberg, Pennsylvania, lived with cousin William Silas Liebendorfer, (a favorite nephew), at Bakersfield, California, during the last few years of her life. She passed away July 30, 1927, almost 90 years old, after being confined to her bed for 4 years and 7 months. In writing of Aunt Maggie, cousin Grace says, "Aunt Margaret was a wonderful woman and a saint of the church, if there ever was one.....We were glad to give her every comfort in her last days".

One of my cousins, Olive Liebendorfer Green (daughter of Samuel B. Liebendörfer of Wurttemberg, Pennsylvania), who lived at Beaver City, Oklahoma, passed away very unexpectedly, April 9, 1937. Her children write so beautifully concerning her life: "Mother was very devout in her Christian life, and was fully prepared to go beyond. We found her well worn Bible on her pillow, where she had read it as her last conscious act, you might say.....Although she was deprived of higher education, herself, she always coveted the best of everything for her children, and would make any sacrifice necessary to gain that end. Her ambition for her children was, that every child should be qualified to teach school, and be able to teach, if possible. We fulfilled that ambition to the best of our ability,--all of whom are alive..

"There are very few who stood hardships and disappointment, as she did, and yet was pure gold, a trusting faithful Christian, always. Her sweet smile, her kindly words, and her Christian counsel! Like Abraham Lincoln, 'All I am or ever hope to be, I owe to my sainted mother'..... I have seen her make a 'hand' in the field, in order that the boys might not miss a day at school,--not once, but many many times.....give darling little mother most of the credit for what her children have accomplished, for it rightly belongs to her."

Cousin Olive leaves 7 living children. All have made good. Certainly, Proverbs 31:28, "Her children shall rise up and call her blessed", has been exemplified in her life.

In early days, at Wurttemberg, before local churches were built, it was usual to start for Church, some few miles distant, as early as Friday or Saturday, and perhaps not return until Monday. This was particularly true of Communion Sunday. Some churches required that members would present themselves before certain ones of the Church officials, the day before communion, for recognition. If all was satisfactory, the member received a small piece of metal or lead, called a "token", this to be given in at the service hour.

There were very few physicians in the early part of the nineteenth century. Emergency cases had to be cared for with just the best that meagre home facilities could do for the patient. My great grandfather, Johann Jakob Liebendörfer, Jr., met his death by drinking too much cold water, after being overheated. This condition was brought on, as he overtaxed his strength while driving cattle, which had gotten into his field of corn.

Dr. George M. Mehard, born at Wurttemberg, September 22, 1857, was the youngest of eleven children born to Robert and Christian Liebendörfer Mehard. He practiced in his home town nine years, and then moved to Wampum, Pennsylvania, recognized as an outstanding physician.

George Frederick Rapp, born in Germany, in 1789, became my great uncle when he married Anna Maria Liebendörfer, also born in Germany, in 1796. She was the second daughter of the "emigrant", great grandfather, Johann Jakob Liebendörfer, Jr.. George Frederick Rapp was a nephew of "Father" Rapp. Quite naturally, "Father" Rapp desired that George Frederick would join the Economites, but he did not care to do so, preferring to reside at Wurttemberg, Pennsylvania, and there, rear his children.

Great uncle George Frederick Rapp was a soldier before coming to America, and was one of Napoleon's distinguished aides. He received four medals for his valor, three of them being awarded to him while he was yet in Germany, and one was sent to him, after he came to America. Unfortunately, it seems that these medals have been lost. The German medals were silver. He had one French medal of gold.

George Frederick Rapp suffered untold hardship in the army, but notwithstanding this, he showed wonderful courage and bravery. Some of his grandchildren remember seeing the bullet holes through his ears. He went for days without food or water, and more than once faced starvation.

One piece of bravery for which he received a medal, was the capture of 60 enemy soldiers, lone-handed, one at a time, during a single night. (Relatives differ somewhat as to the number.) This was a piece of strategy, for the enemy thought, from his self-poise, that he had an army hidden in the brush, which would emerge at his signal.

It has been said that, "he was one of eight to cross the Alps with Napoleon", also, that after fighting four years for Napoleon, he was taken prisoner, and forced to fight four more years in the wars of liberation. He helped to drag the cannons, by ropes, over the Alps. On the way back from Moscow, the men were starving, until they found dead sheep on the mountain side. Although the sheep heads were covered with maggots, the soldiers roasted them, and ate them with a relish. In their weakness and desperation, it seemed like wonderful food to them.

I have been told that great uncle George Frederick Rapp's military discharge from the German army, mysteriously disappeared from its place of safe keeping, behind a picture, that hung on the wall of the hotel, in Wurttemberg, Pennsylvania.

The present exhibition is the first of its kind in the history of the country. It is a most interesting and valuable collection of objects, and is well worth a visit to all who are interested in the history and progress of the nation.

John George Rapp ("Father" Rapp) of Harmony, Pennsylvania, and great uncle George Frederick Rapp, of Wurttemberg, Pennsylvania, used to correspond and exchange ideas. At one time, "Father" Rapp sent his nephew some silk worms for industrial experimentation. The project did not seem to be very profitable at Wurttemberg. Perhaps it was difficult to grow the proper food for them. George Frederick had several invitations to operate the hotel at Harmony. I understand that he refused, because it would have required that he sell liquor over the bar.

This incident, which shows the alertness of George Frederick Rapp, was told to me (L.M.L.P.): One day at the brick hotel, which he operated in Wurttemberg, George Frederick Rapp was suddenly confronted by a man who pointed a pistol directly at him. At this time, George Frederick was quite well along in years. The man was not an enemy, but one who wanted to see how the old soldier would react. In another moment, he had found out. Quick as a flash, George Frederick disarmed the man, and calmly pointed the gun at him, greatly to his astonishment, and that of the bystanders in the hotel.

I heard an interesting incident about the strategy of great uncle, George Frederick Rapp. For some time, he had been missing corn, so he built a "man-trap", and placed it in the corn crib. When he went out to the crib the next morning, there was his suspected neighbor, caught in the trap, waiting for him. Uncle George Frederick released the thief, filled his sack with corn, then took him into the house, where a good warm breakfast was provided. Breakfast over, Uncle George Frederick bade his neighbor, "Go, and sin no more".

It has been my privilege to visit practically all of the towns of the United States which were founded by our ancestors. I cannot say with certainty how many there are, but I have visited Wurttemberg, Zellenople, Harmony, Economy, and Ambridge, in Pennsylvania, and New Harmony in Indiana. Many valuable relics of each place, which today would be highly prized, have been thoughtlessly destroyed. Enough remains, however, to make a visit interesting and well worth while. Even if one's only reward be the creation of an increased respect, and a deeper love for worthy ancestry, I say, it is worth while.

When we think back to Harmonie, Indiana, we are reminded of the marvelous labyrinth, which one time was there, at the edge of town. Now, only a marker remains.

In those halcyon days of the Rappites, the labyrinth was made up of many circuitous and confusing pathways, which were hedged with yew, higher than one's head. In the summer time, the labyrinth blossomed with beautiful flowers. In the center of the maze was a small octagonal "gartenhaus", built of tiny octagonal blocks. It had a door made of a single plank, having a mysterious lock, which no one could open without great ingenuity. When once the door was opened, you could step inside of a beautifully furnished comfortable room. It was a Rappite symbol, after the fashion of the old Hebrew prophets, who used to make tiny model cities, and then destroy them before the people, to show how easily their city could be destroyed.

To the people of Harmonie, the labyrinth was supposed to say, "Thus difficult it is, by many paths, to win one's way to ease and comfort". The hedge was cut down, about 1840.

There was but one steamboat on the Ohio River in 1813. It was called the "New Orleans", and it had then been in operation for two years. When the Harmonites left Harmonie, Indiana, in 1824, most of them returned to Pennsylvania on the steamboat "William Penn", which was built especially for them, at Pittsburgh.

Great Aunt Maria Margaretha Liebendörfer (as her name appears in the Church record at Grossglattbach, Germany), married a baker, by the name of Greenhart, and lived in Philadelphia. They had two sons. It seems that "Auntie Greenhart", as she is today familiarly called, and remembered by some of the older generation, was married to Andrew Manuel, prior to her marriage with Mr. Greenhart. Both were Philadelphia men. We give a few facts which will clarify your thinking.

Maria Margaretha Liebendörfer was born in Germany, October 11, 1794, and came to America with her parents, in 1817. She with her husband, Andrew Manuel, signed their names to a deed, under date of May 31, 1834, which may be seen at the Beaver County, Pennsylvania court house. This is a deed signed by the children of Johann Jakob Liebendörfer, Jr., the "emigrant" (her father), and states that both Anna Margaret Manuel (as she signed her name), and Andrew Manuel, are "of the city of Philadelphia". Her full name may easily have been "Anna Maria Margaretha", and the middle name of "Maria" could have been dropped to avoid confusion, because her sister, Mrs. George Frederick Rapp, was named Anna Maria Liebendörfer, born in Germany, April 4, 1796. Great Aunt Maria Margaretha was evidently 40 years old, when she, as Mrs. Manuel, signed that deed.

After Maria Margaretha Liebendörfer Manuel married Mr. Greenhart, different relatives from Wurttemberg, Pennsylvania, at various times, were guests in the Greenhart Philadelphia home. Mrs. Margaret Zeigler (a cousin of my father), now living in New Castle, Pennsylvania, was married at "Auntie Greenhart's". I do not know the year, but presume it was about 1878. Mrs. Matilda Steffler (a cousin of my father), now living in Pittsburgh, told me of visiting "Auntie Greenhart", during the Centennial of 1876. Mrs. Steffler was then 29 years old, and "Auntie Greenhart" was 82 years old.

Great aunt Friderica Liebendörfer, who was born in Germany, September 27, 1804, married a Philadelphia man, named Christian Keller, and lived in that city. She, Friderica Keller (as she signed her name), and her husband, have their signatures affixed to the deed of May 31, 1834, mentioned above, at which time she would have been 30 years old.

Conrad Fisher, who married great aunt Wilhelmina Liebendörfer, had a goose and pea-fowl farm at Wurttemberg, Pennsylvania.

Youngsters will be youngsters any time, anywhere, if they but get a chance. Mrs. Matilda Mehard Steffler (daughter of Christian Liebendörfer), now in her gay nineties, told me this past summer (1937), how she and Mrs. Eliza Liebendörfer Riffer (daughter of Michael Liebendörfer), slid down a snow covered hill, when children in school, at Wurttemberg, Pennsylvania. They were seated, for coasting, each on one-half of a bread bowl, and got quite wet and cold. When they arrived at school, the teacher was stern, and demanded to know if they had been into mischief. "No, just sliding down hill!", was their reply.

I have my Grandfather Liebendörfer's family Bible, and I prize it very highly. In recent years, it was in the possession of Aunt Thusen Elda Liebendörfer, until July, 1936, when she gave it to me. It is printed in German, with German letters, and I judge it was purchased in Philadelphia, doubtless soon after the family came to America. It is bound in leather, probably cowhide, and had two brass and leather combination fasteners. One of them is now missing. The appearance of the Bible certainly gives evidence of much use. It has meant much to me in obtaining accurate information about the family, for Grandfather had carefully kept a detailed record. On one page of the "Family Register" is this notation, in his handwriting:

In the old Liebendörfer family Bible (written in German), I discovered a leaf from a small school primer, with the title, "Erstes Buch für deutsche Schulen", i.e., "First Book for German Schools". About two-thirds of the leaf is given to the subject, "Das Wirthshaus", "The Tavern". It is an unusual temperance lesson, based on the following texts of Scripture: -Proverbs 21:17; 23:27-32; Isaiah 5:11; Galatians 5:19; 1 Corinthians 6:10.

Some of you may enjoy reading what the primer says about it. This you may do, by looking up the above texts.

Just recently, I was delighted to find some of Grandfather's sermon outlines. They were in the German Bible, also. One of them was a presentation of the text found in Acts 19:23. "And the same time there arose no small stir about that way."

By way of introduction, he explains the word "stir", to mean "tumult" about the Gospel. The text is explained by three points for discussion:

1. The Gospel is a peculiar way of thinking.
2. The Gospel is a peculiar way of feeling.
3. The Gospel is a peculiar way of acting.

In conclusion, he suggests that the excitement brought inquiry, prayer, and activity.

I have a part of an old German paper or magazine, which evidently was at one time in the grandparental Liebendörfer home. Where did I get it? Yes, you are a good guesser. It, too, was in the family Bible. In those earlier days, people of moderate means did not subscribe to many periodicals, so I think. It may have been a copy of the German paper, "Der Christliche Botschafter", mentioned on page 91. I do not know the date of the paper, as to the year, but likely it was published during the early period of reconstruction following the Civil War. Since what I have is really but a fragment of the complete paper, some of the articles are necessarily incomplete, but I think you will like it, so here is a translation of it:

"World says: Judge Casean (?) of Texas, and other prominent gentlemen, are here to accomplish the emancipation of Jefferson Davis.

"Between Philadelphia and Lynchburg, now the train goes without any change of coaches--something which was not possible before the war.

"The State Convention of Alabama has in a test vote, adopted a resolution whereby it will not repudiate the guilt of the state in rebelling (against the Union). It appears that they are as little willing to ratify the amendment to the Constitution forbidding slavery as their noble colleagues of Mississippi, if at the same time this means for slavery to be abolished as a custom.

If he refuses, it is decided in all cases pertaining to the negro, in such places now just as before martial law.

"The Establishment of a great national and international express company in Richmond.--New York, September 20. The Richmond Whig says that on Monday evening, an assembly of the capitalists was held, which was extraordinarily well attended. The purpose was the establishment of a national and international express company.

"President Lopez of Paraguay has developed an unusually strong force to withstand the attack of the three opposing powers. Every man and youth capable of bearing arms, will be pressed into the army, and the agricultural labor will have to be carried on by the women. One may observe then, that Lopez has nearly 100,000 men under arms, and is supplied with artillery of incomparable excellence.

"The president is daily besieged with literal pardon seekers. Many prove to be loafers about the White House.

"In Missouri there are several Catholic priests who would not take the demanded oath of allegiance to the new State Constitution. They were arrested.

"Corn fiber and its use.--Of what are we to make paper in the future? It is a pertinent question directly concerning the paper manufacturers. And they have a right to ask this, for it is a well known fact, that the consumption of paper in all civilized countries, and especially in our own republic, is felt to be on the rapidly growing increase. The consequences of this enormous consumption of paper become more and more evident, because the paper manufacturers have greater and greater difficulty in obtaining the necessary raw material in sufficient quantities for the carrying on of their business. For the rags which are used for the most part in the making of paper, cannot be produced at will, as other raw materials, for their production moves within rather narrow limits. It is plain that sooner or later, the moment must come when the paper manufacturers cannot keep up with the paper consumption.....The paper which is made from it, is stronger than that made from linen and cotton rags of the same weight, and its durability is greater than that of any other paper, and insects cannot grow or destroy it, as is the case with parchment. Every kind of paper, from ordinary wrapping paper to the finest bank note paper, can be made from this new material. Already, a stock company has been formed in the city of New York, to purchase the patent and to turn the invention to advantage.

"Misogyny in the South.--In a recent letter from General Schurz to the Boston Advertiser, he communicated this delightful example of the hatred of the Southern women toward those of the North. (The example was not enclosed on the newspaper fragment which I found.)

THE FOLLOWING INFORMATION IS FOR YOUR INFORMATION ONLY. IT IS NOT TO BE USED FOR ANY OTHER PURPOSE.

1. The first step in the process of the investigation is the identification of the subject. This is done by the use of the subject's name, address, and other identifying information. The subject is then located and interviewed. The interview is conducted in a confidential manner and the subject is assured that the information provided will be kept confidential. The subject is then asked to provide a statement of the facts of the case. This statement is then reviewed and compared with the information obtained from the subject's background check. The results of the investigation are then reported to the appropriate authorities.

1. The above information was obtained from a confidential source who has provided reliable information in the past.

"The Isthmus of Suez, which now is cut through by a canal, connects Europe with Asia. It is 75 miles wide. With the exception of a hill, 30 or 45 feet high, the entire stretch rises only five to eight feet above sea level, with a depression on the side of the Mediterranean Sea.

"The work was begun in the year, 1852, by a joint stock company, under the direction of Lesseps, a French engineer with a capital of 40 million dollars, and the canal was opened in 1859. The canal extends between Suez, the city, and the Gulf of Pelusium. It is only 90 miles long, 20 feet deep, at the lower waterfront of the Mediterranean Sea, and 330 feet wide. Its importance in shortening the route between the two continents can not yet be completely measured as to time."

And so concludes the "news" from the old German newspaper.

Isn't "cousin" a most convenient term? Well, bless their lives! I have found some wonderful ones, whom I never would have known, except through the work of this genealogy. When it takes too long to figure out the particular relationship of some of the family whom you chance to meet, just let "cousin" suffice.

My (L.M.L.P.) father (Jacob Daniel Liebendörfer) and mother were married at, or near Camden, Illinois, about 1858. They went to live on a farm near Viola, Illinois, which was bought as government land. I recall my brother, Arthur, telling me of a trying experience which took place in the home, just before the final payment was made on the homestead. It had required much sacrifice, as well as hard work, on the part of father and mother, to accumulate, and save enough money to meet this payment. The needs of a family of children had to be considered, too. You wonder where the precious treasure was kept, as it had been added to from time to time. In the bank? No, indeed! Within the interior of a good old fashioned feather bed tick,--plus the feathers.

Now, for the scene above mentioned. Brother Arthur, coming in from the field, one day, found my mother in tears, as she frantically searched the feather bed. The money was missing! It was gone! Could it have been stolen? Of course it could have been, but thank the Lord, it wasn't! After carefully examining each tiny handful of feathers, it was found, carefully smuggled away, waiting, to fulfill its mission of bringing great joy, to the home nest.

Some years later, as prosperity crowned their hard work, careful management, and economy, my parents became the possessors of the first top buggy owned by any family in their neighborhood. You may rest assured that it was paid for, too, when purchased, and not bought "on time". The old home was small, but often it served as the community "meeting house", when the preacher came around. The people could not always have services at the school-house church.

My father sold his farm of 160 acres, in Mercer County, Illinois, to Mr. Sherrard, for a consideration of $50 per acre. It soon became the property of a coal prospecting company, and upon the old farm, was built the town of Mather'sville, Illinois, now (1937), a quiet village of several hundred inhabitants. After the sale of the farm, my parents, with their three living children, moved to Pawnee City, Pawnee County, Nebraska. Before going to Nebraska, father made a business trip there, to investigate the possibilities in this newer country. After his visit, which was satisfactory to him, my mother and brother, Arthur, went to Nebraska, also, to see the new land, before our removal there. I was too small to go (of course, I did not think so), so it was decided to have a housekeeper look after the home; and my brother, Edward, and I, remained at home with father, while mother and Arthur were gone. I was fairly contented, however, for mother promised me a new doll and doll carriage, if I would be a good girl and stay at home. Mother kept her word--she always did--and no one can ever know how greatly I enjoyed my reward. I think it was purchased in Rock Island, Illinois.

Many things indicate that our ancestors had a great love for Nature. Their homes were usually in the midst of many trees, and often beside a flowing stream. Hills and mountains held a fascination for them, too.

Although I was but a child when my father passed away, I well recall the beautiful garden which he so systematically and skillfully planned and cultivated. It was more like a picture in some seed catalog, than a reality of things to eat. Each vegetable had its own elevated "bed", with bordered pathways between. Strawberries and grapes seemed always at their best under his care.

SUMMARY AND CONCLUSION

"Those who never look back to their ancestors, will never look forward to their posterity."

1. GENERAL SCOPE OF THE GENEALOGICAL HISTORY; FROM 1937 BACK TO ADAM; ABOUT 6000 YEARS.

When it comes to a matter of being definitely accurate as to dates before the time of Christ, that is not possible. The chronologist, Bishop Ussher, has given us what is generally accepted as the basis for estimating dates, that of considering 4004 B.C. as the beginning of the Creation. As to generations, they covered a much longer period of time in the earliest history of mankind than in the middle ages, and many times longer in the middle ages than today. It is reasonable to think of a generation in the time of Adam to Noah, as covering from 300 to 700 years. Today, we count 20 years as a generation. Quite a difference!

When we attempt to think in terms of thousands of years, we are lost in a maze of wonderment. Yet, this world as we know it, is very young in comparison with eternity. Archeological surveys and unexpected findings underneath the earth's surface, have revealed traces of prehistoric races, which certainly lived before the creation of this present world. Just how old is the mass of materials which formed the world, no one knows. At a recent meeting of the British Association for the Advancement of Science, it was agreed that perhaps the best estimate is four or five billion years. Continuous investigations bring valuable information.

We mention a few of the many discoveries which have taken place in recent years: In 1891, a Dutch doctor, on the Island of Java, was watching some workmen digging in a river bank. Very old fossil bones were unearthed--some teeth, part of a skull, and about a year later, near the same spot, he found a thigh bone, which evidently had belonged to this same prehistoric skeleton. Scientists believe it to be a material trace of the earliest type of man; it represents an age about 500,000 years ago, possibly much longer ago than that.

In 1911, fossil bones of primitive man were found near the town of Piltdown, Sussex, England. As late as 1931, science has asserted it to be one of the earliest types, probably of 300,000 years ago. In 1912, near Ipswich, England, there were bones of a man discovered, supposed to be the most ancient yet found in Europe.

What is known as the Neanderthal Cave Man, applies to an early type, based on the finding of a human skull, 60 feet beneath the earth's surface; it was discovered by quarrymen in a ravine, called Neanderthal, near Hochdal, in Rhenish Prussia. It probably represented life of 50,000 years ago.

In 1931, there was found in a cave near Ulm, Germany, the skull of a man of the Aurignacian period, of some 20,000 to 50,000 years ago. The cave was a neolithic burial place, and also contained bones of mammoths and other prehistoric animals. How wonderful it is that we have a great Creator who really knows about these things which are so mysterious to us.

Every human being has had a father and mother, four grandfathers and four grandmothers, eight great grandfathers and eight great grandmothers, etc.. Continue going back for just fifty-four generations, and you will find that each one, (in order to be living today), had 2,251,799,813,685,248 (over two and one-half quadrillion) relatives. Fifty-four generations cover only a finite period of time.

From the creation of Adam and Eve, we may consider the passing of about 150 generations between the dates 4004 B.C. and 1937 A.D.. The first home of Adam and Eve was the Garden of Eden. Its location, quite likely, was about the same as the present site of Armenia.

We may well consider that the genealogy of every individual human being, goes back to the line given in Luke 3:23-38. These are the generations from God, the Creator, through Adam, until Christ. This is the record from Adam until Noah.

Noah, 3116 B.C.--

The dates given above are according to the Hebrew chronology. (Bible Encyclopedia, by Rev. Samuel Fallows, A.M., D.D., L.L.D.. Volume I, page 418.)

From this point, there must be careful discrimination. Sir William Jones, famous English Orientalist, in his book, "On the Origin and Families of Nations", says in substance: "it is no longer probable only, but it is absolutely certain that the whole race of man proceeded from Iran (the proper and native name of Persia and some connected regions), as from a center, when they migrated at first in three great colonies; and that those three branches grew from a common stock, which had been miraculously preserved during a general convulsion and inundation of the globe".

After the Flood (2516 B.C.), we follow the line of the sons of Noah, as recorded in Genesis 10:1-3. It is generally conceded that Japheth is the progenitor of the white or Caucasian race. The descendants of Japheth occupied the "isles of the Gentiles" or "isles of the nations", as written in Genesis 10:5. These were the coast lands of the Mediterranean Sea in Europe and Asia Minor--from whence they spread northward over the whole continent of Europe and a portion of Asia. The line of Japheth is as follows:

Noah, 3116 B.C.--

Japheth

Gomer

Ashkenaz

The Jews have considered that the descendants of Ashkenaz settled in that part of the world, which we now know as Germany. This idea seems to be accepted by different historians. A reference to the kingdom of Ashkenaz is found in Jeremiah 51:27.

The next step in tracing your own genealogy in a general way, is to first determine, if possible, with what religious group your ancestry was identified. If they were German Jews, then, we might expect their lineage to follow through the families and towns founded by them. King Zedekiah was the last king of the Jews.

Prior to 1534, Württemberg, Germany, the kingdom, or province, in which the most of our ancestors lived, was under Austrian rule and Roman Catholic dominion. During this year of 1534, Duke Ulrich supported the Reformation in Württemberg.

The German people from Saxony, may find their genealogy to follow this line of generations: Noah, 3116 B.C.; Shem; Bedwig; Guala; Hathra; Itermon; Heremod; Sceldi; Beaw; Taetwa; Geat; Godwulf; Finn; Frithwulf; Frealaf; Frithowald; Woden; Beldeg; Brond; Gewis; Elesa; Cerdic, 519 A.D.; Cynric, 552 A.D.; Ceawlin; Cuthwin; Cudam; Ceolwald; Coenred; Ingild; Eoppa, 757 A.D.; Eafa; Elmund; Egbert, 815 A.D.; Ethelwulf; Alfred the Great, 849 A.D., king of Anglo Saxons. This is a line of rulers. The peasantry would have their own family lines, but during the time of the leaders just named.

Through the line of Napoleon, we find some German families, and some of the German family genealogies are found in France. Other German families are traced to William the Conqueror, and still others to Frederick the Great. From Charlemagne, there are three great regal lines; that of his son, King Louis, was over Germany. We give some of the principal rulers and epoch making events in the history of Germany. These dates are those generally accepted as correct, and they will assist in following specific historical genealogy you may wish to trace: Louis I, King, 843 A.D.; Louis II, 855 A.D.; Charles, the Fat, 876 A.D.; Arnwulf, Emperor, 887 A.D.; Conrad I, King, 911 A.D.; Henry, the Fowler, 919 A.D.; Otto, the Great, 936 A.D.; Henry II, Emperor, 1002 A.D.; Conrad II, 1024 A.D.; Henry III, Emperor, 1039 A.D.; Civil War in Germany, 1077-1080 A.D.; Henry V, crowned by pope, 1111 A.D.; Henry V, married Matilda of England, 1114 A.D.; Frederic Barbarossa, Emperor, 1152 A.D.; Henry VI, Emperor, 1190 A.D.; Frederic II, Emperor, 1215 A.D.; Conrad IV, Emperor, 1250 A.D.; Rudolph, Emperor, 1273 A.D.; Adolphus; Albert I, 1298 A.D.; Henry of Luxembourg, 1308 A.D.; Louis of Bavaria, 1322 A.D.; Wencelas, Emperor, 1378 A.D.; Rupert, Count Palatine, 1400 A.D.; Sigismund, 1411 A.D.; Albert II, 1438 A.D.; Civil War, 1462

A.D.; Maximilian I, Emperor, 1493 A.D.; Luther and his theses, 1517 A.D.; Charles V, 1519 A.D.; Treaty of Westphalia, 1648 A.D.; Leopold I, 1658 A.D.; Hohenzollern dynasty, established, 1701 A.D.; Charles VI, Emperor, 1711 A.D.; Francis I, 1745 A.D.; Napoleon's Austrian Campaign, 1797 A.D.; Congress of Vienna, 1815 A.D..

About 1867, Bavaria, Württemberg, and Baden allied themselves with the North German Confederacy.

1900--Abolition of Roman law

1919--Ebert elected president

1926--Germany admitted to the League of Nations

1932--Hindenburg re-elected president

1933--Adolf Hitler made dictator; Germany unified under Nazi rule; resigns from League of Nations

1934--Death of Hindenburg; Hitler becomes Führer

1937--Finds Germany still a land of natural beauty, which is visited yearly, by many foreigners from America and other nations.

Information concerning rulers, dates, source towns, and family names, with money, patience, and perseverance, if properly mixed, and then separated, will accomplish the work of tracing out your complete genealogy. Start with what you already know about your family line, and from those cues, delve, bravely and hopefully, into the unknown. Please do not be disappointed that I have not done this part of the work completely, for you. It would require more time, money, and strength than I have at my command.

2. SPECIFIC TIME COVERED IN THIS GENEALOGICAL HISTORY; 450 A.D. TO 1937--ALMOST 1500 YEARS. ABOUT 400 A.D., THE ANCESTRAL REGION WAS THE ESTATE OF ALEMANNEN TUBILO; IN 942, KNOWN AS TUOBILINDORF.

This very early date of 450 A.D., has to do with the township of Dübendorf, Switzerland, which is located near the city of Zürich. The family, Dübendorfer, is recorded in the "Historical-biographical Lexicon of Switzerland" as early as 1463, at Baltenswil, in the parish of Nürensdörf. Dübendorfer, (inhabitant of Dübendorf), was the name of our early ancestors who lived in Switzerland. Today, (1937), the town of Dübendorf is a flourishing suburb of Zürich, and the site of a Federal Military Flying Field. Our "common German ancestor" is shown to be Rudolph Dübendorfer, who was born May 19, 1644, in Kloten, Switzerland. With his parents, he went to Germany, about 1663. The Church record at Grossglattbach, Germany, states, "died here, September 5; 1693, in 49th year". The name was "Liebendorfer" after the year 1682, so this ancestor must have had the name Dübendorfer for the first thirty-eight years, which he lived. These dates, given in the German records, afford us 173 years of genealogy from 1644 to 1817, when Johann Jakob Liebendörfer, Jr., the "emigrant", came to America. From 1817 until 1937, we trace the Liebendörfer family in America.

3. NUMBER AND NAMES OF DESCENDANTS OF JOHANN JAKOB LIEBENDÖRFER, JR., WHO HAVE LIVED IN AMERICA. IT IS COMPLETE, SO FAR AS I KNOW. ALL OF THESE ARE IN THE BLOOD-LINE.

The number as we have it, is about 700, in round numbers. To the best of our ability, we have tried to have a complete record, but that is almost an impossibility. Many are the letters we have written, in order to do this, but some of them failed to bring any reply, and that will account, in part at least, for whatever incompleteness you may discover. This list of names is arranged in chronological order. The names of the twelve children of Johann Jakob Liebendörfer, Jr., the "emigrant", are capitalized, and in order of their birth. The chronological lineage of each of these twelve children, immediately follows their respective names. This plan will enable you to quickly locate your family, ancestors, and descendants.

1. The first part of the document is a list of names and titles, including "The Hon. Mr. Justice" and "The Hon. Mr. Justice".

1. The first step in the process is to identify the problem or issue that needs to be addressed. This involves gathering information and understanding the context of the problem.

[illegible][illegible][illegible]

1. The first part of the document is a letter from the President of the United States to the Congress, dated January 3, 1862. It is a message of condolence to the people of the State of California, who have been afflicted by a severe drought and famine. The President expresses his sympathy for the suffering and his hope that the Congress will take prompt action to relieve the distress.

1. The first of these is the fact that the Commission has not yet received any information from the Government of the Republic of China (Taiwan) regarding the situation in the Republic of China (Taiwan) since the end of the Second World War.

1. The first part of the document is a letter from the President of the United States to the Congress, dated January 1, 1861. It is a very important document, as it sets out the President's policy towards the South and the Union. The President states that he is committed to the Union and to the Constitution, and that he will use all the power at his disposal to maintain the Union. He also states that he will not interfere with the rights of the States, but that he will not allow the States to secede from the Union.

1. The first step is to identify the problem or question that needs to be answered. This involves understanding the context and the specific requirements of the task.

2. The second step is to gather relevant information and data. This can be done through research, consultation with experts, or by analyzing existing data sets.

3. The third step is to develop a plan or strategy to address the problem. This involves breaking down the problem into smaller, manageable parts and determining the best approach to solve each part.

4. The fourth step is to implement the plan. This involves putting the strategy into action and monitoring progress to ensure that the problem is being solved effectively.

5. The fifth step is to evaluate the results. This involves comparing the outcomes of the solution to the original problem and determining whether the solution is satisfactory.

6. The sixth step is to communicate the findings. This involves sharing the results of the solution with the relevant stakeholders and providing a clear explanation of the reasoning behind the solution.

7. The seventh step is to reflect on the process. This involves thinking about what worked well and what could be improved in the future to make the problem-solving process more efficient.

1. The first part of the document is a list of names and their corresponding dates. The names are: "John Doe", "Jane Smith", "Bob Johnson", "Alice Brown", "Charlie White", "David Green", "Eve Black", "Frank Gray", "Grace Pink", "Henry Blue", "Ivy Yellow", "Jack Purple", "Karen Red", "Leo Orange", "Mia Silver", "Noah Gold", "Olivia Bronze", "Peter Copper", "Quinn Iron", "Rory Tin", "Sam Lead", "Tina Zinc", "Uma Nickel", "Victor Platinum", "Wendy Silver", "Xavier Gold", "Yara Bronze", "Zoe Copper". 1. The first part of the document is a letter from the President of the United States to the Congress, dated January 1, 1861. It is a formal address, and it is the first of its kind since the signing of the Constitution. The President, James Buchanan, is addressing the Congress, and he is doing so in a very formal and dignified manner. He is discussing the state of the Union, and he is also discussing the issue of slavery. He is saying that the Union is in a state of crisis, and that he is doing everything in his power to maintain it. He is also saying that he is not going to allow the Union to be divided by the issue of slavery.

12. FAVORITE NAMES FOR LIEBENDÖRFER MEN, AS INDICATED BY THEIR FREQUENCY.

Names were carried down from generation to generation. I know of 5 men named Johann Jakob (John Jacob) Liebendorfer. There may have

1. The first thing I noticed when I stepped out of the plane was the cold air.
It felt like a giant hand
reaching out to grab me.
I shivered and pulled my coat tighter around me.
The ground below was a vast, flat expanse of white, stretching out to the horizon.

As I walked, I noticed the snow was not just on the ground, but also on the trees and the roofs of the buildings.

The silence was absolute. There was no sound of cars, no
laughter, no nothing.
It was a strange kind of peace, but also a little scary.

I had heard that the winter in this country was harsh, but I didn't realize it would be this quiet.

As I continued my walk, I noticed the snow was falling again.
It was a soft, gentle fall, like a blanket being dropped from the sky.

I had never seen
snow like this before.
It was beautiful, but also a little overwhelming.

The snow was so deep that I had to be careful not to slip. I took small, cautious steps, feeling the snow under my feet. It was like walking on a giant pillow. The world seemed so different in this white landscape.
I had never felt so small before.

I had heard that the winter was beautiful, but I didn't realize it would be so quiet.

The snow was falling so fast now that I could hardly see the ground. It was like being in a white tunnel.
I had never experienced this before.

been others. They were my great-great grandfather, Johann Jakob Liebendörfer, Sr.; my great grandfather, Johann Jakob Liebendörfer, Jr.; and my grandfather, Johann Jacob Liebendörfer, III; the father of Wilhelm Liebendörfer, our oldest relative now living in Germany; and also, the father of James Campbell Liebendorfer. Two other relatives had the name of John Jacob. They were John Jacob Fisher and John Jacob Mehard.

In our research, James appears 29 times; John appears 26 times; Edward appears 15 times; William appears 14 times; and Charles appears 10 times.

*****

13. FAVORITE NAMES FOR LIEBENDÖRFER WOMEN, AS INDICATED BY THEIR FREQUENCY.

Although women were not given much prominence, except as mothers and homemakers, the continuity of names is very striking.

Our research shows that Mary, Maria, or Marie appears 24 times; Anna, Anne, or Ann appears 20 times; Christiana, Christina, Christena, Christine, or Christerrie appears 18 times; May, Mae, or Mai appears 12 times; and Jane, Jean, or Gene appears 10 times.

14. NUMBER OF CHILDREN, GRANDCHILDREN, AND GREAT GRANDCHILDREN OF MY GREAT GRANDFATHER, THE "EMIGRANT".

Now, let's get this straight: first, my great grandfather was Johann Jakob Liebendörfer, Jr., born, 1766. He was the "emigrant", who migrated from Germany to America, in 1817, and he was your first German-American relative, also the "common ancestor" of all the family in America. His father, Johann Jakob Liebendörfer, Sr., born, 1730, never left Germany.

Now, about "der kinder": Great grandfather, Johann Jakob Liebendörfer, Jr., had 12 children; 74 grandchildren; 166 great grandchildren; 234 great-great grandchildren; 182 great-great-great grandchildren; 21 great-great-great-great grandchildren. I leave it to you to state the number in the next generation.

We shall not attempt to give a complete record of the present generation, to date, but the total descendants are about 700 people.

16. CONCLUSION.

Shall we now say that this Genealogical History is concluded? No, indeed! It is only well begun! Eternity, alone, shall make it complete.

We trust that Liebendorfers and their posterity, everywhere, may be proud of their sturdy and honorable ancestry; however, we must not live in the idylls of the past. The future is before us; yes, at our feet.

"He who is ambitious for his child,
Should give him names, untried.
Those which served his closest kin,
Perchance, may weaken him with pride,
Or, even hinder, by their allure;
Set him therefore, to make his own story,
And crown his individual name
With greater praise and self-earned glory."

--L. M. L. P.

"We live in deeds, not years; in thoughts, not breaths;
In feelings, not in figures on a dial.
We should count time by heart throbs. He most lives
Who thinks most, feels the noblest, acts the best.
Life's but a means unto an end; that end
Beginning, means an end to all things,--God."

--Festus, Scene 5
